INSPECTION

Under pressure children's chief says sorry as Ofsted slams 'inadequate' care

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A DAMNING Ofsted report into child protection services at Medway Council has revealed that some vulnerable children are not getting adequate protection.

Inspectors rated the service inadequate – the lowest Ofsted rating – and demanded improvements be made.

During the inspection they found that while no children were at immediate risk, some were not protected as well as they should be or quickly enough and that social workers and managers did not always follow procedures.

Decision-making by managers also came under fire, with inspectors calling for improvements to ensure help and protection is offered to children and families at the right time.

The report stated that some cases are being closed too early, without the right support being provided, resulting in too many re-referrals.

Cabinet member for children's services Les Wicks apologised and confirmed that a "fast pace of change" was being brought about to address the priorities for improvement.

"I unreservedly apologise to the people of Medway for our failure to deliver the children's safeguarding service that our children and young people deserve," he said. "The situation is not good enough and is not acceptable."

"Early last year it was clear to me that we were not improving fast enough to meet the standards children deserve."

"Things needed to change faster and that is why in June last year we appointed Barbara Peacock as our new director of children's and adults' services."

"Since then, we have completed a thorough review of the whole children's safeguarding area and in late 2012 we instigated a major programme of change that was already starting to address the weaknesses identified by Ofsted's inspection in January."

"We still have much to do, but are committed to working with our partners to protect children who are at risk."

Director of children and adult services, Barbara Peacock, said the council wholly accepted the findings.

"The inspectors have highlighted that Medway has committed and conscientious social workers and our improvement plan builds on that commitment to their work," she said. "Ofsted has recognised that we already have a comprehensive improvement plan and we are already making rapid progress."

Leader of the Labour party at Medway, Vince Maple, said Cllr Wicks' apology was "not good enough" and called for him to step down.

"As the politician with responsibility for Medway's young people, Cllr Wicks must recognise that this inspection which has the worst possible judgement happened on his watch," said Cllr Maple. "After previous failings on critical issues – including Medway being bottom of the Key Stage 2 league table and the incompetent school reorganisation programme – the only option for him is to step down from this portfolio."

Labour spokesman for children and young people, Adam Price, raised concerns over whether one director for both children and adult services was enough.

"We call on the council to revert to

SORRY: Cllr Les Wicks has apologised for Medway child protection services' inadequate rating, as reported by Ofsted the former senior leadership model of separate directors of children's and adults' services to ensure the best possible chance of recovering," he said.

"We also call on the council to publicly report back in 100 days on the progress that has been made to attempt to regain some confidence with Medway residents following the report."

This is not the first time a Kent council has found itself with an "inadequate" rating for children's services.

In 2010, Ofsted found Kent County Council's child protection "inadequate", where in the worst cases children had been left at significant risk of harm. Some 2,700 vulnerable children were found to be without a social worker.

A report last month showed things have now been turned around.

Charity's plea for foster carers to come forward as almost 1,000 volunteers are urgently needed

A LEADING foster charity has revealed the need for hundreds of new foster families for vulnerable children in care.

Fostering Network says there are 8,700 children living with foster carers in the south east, but some 950 more carers are needed as youngsters come in and out of care through the year.

While the charity was unable to give Kent-specific figures, it is understood a large number of carers are needed in the county. There are more than 2,800 looked-after-children in Kent, who are under the care of Kent County Council.

County Hall chiefs have been active in their campaigning for more foster carers in recent years and these latest figures are likely to spur them on even more.

Chief executive of the Fostering Network, Robert Tapsfield, said: "Despite fostering services attracting more people to become foster carers, the continuing rise of children coming into care means hundreds more are still needed in the south east of England this year alone."

"These children need a stable family life to help them grow and achieve their potential. By becoming a foster carer people can help them have the best possible opportunity for a positive future, to do well at school and be successful in later life."

"Fostering services are looking for people from all walks of life to become foster carers, of all ages, and from single people to large families. What matters is that they have a desire to work with children and the right skills."

The next KCC fostering event, to find out more about what's involved, is on Thursday, February 28, from 7pm-8.30pm, at the Lenham Community Centre, Groom Way, Lenham. See <http://kentfostering.co.uk/> for details.

TRIBUTE

Fond memories of BBC reporter who broke the story of Apollo 13

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

TRIBUTES have been paid to Reg Turnill, the legendary BBC aerospace correspondent who reported on the most thrilling years of the space race, and who died this week.

Mr Turnill passed away after several months of ill health at the Pilgrims' Hospice in Ashford. He was 97.

Born in Dover, he spent recent years living in Sandgate, where he became an active member of the community.

He enjoyed a remarkable career which continued long after his retirement, supporting and founding the popular HG Wells short story competition in Folkestone each year and personally putting up the £1,000 top prize in order to inspire authors to write in the style of the famous storyteller. It forms a key part of the HG Wells Festival in the town which Mr Turnill helped create in 2009.

But it was his time with the BBC for which he will be most remembered.

Having started his Fleet Street career with the Press Association when he was 15, he joined the BBC in 1956 as assistant industrial correspondent. Two years later, he was promoted to air and space correspondent and found himself at the centre of the fast-emerging space race between the US and USSR.

Among his assignments was a trip to Moscow to cover the first manned space launch, and reporting from the US on the Apollo Moon missions. It was in 1970 he secured his biggest scoop when he was the first journalist in the world to break the news that Apollo 13 was in trouble when he heard the immortal words 'Houston we have a problem' as he made a late night visit to mission control.

Speaking of the moment years later, he said: "I was just leaving the deserted press centre when I heard the famous words. By 5am I'd broken the story. The astronauts were in deadly danger."

In 1969, he was on board the maiden flight of

JOURNALIST: Reg Turnill went on assignment to Nasa during the Apollo Moon missions

Concorde and continued his association with the BBC – most recently contributing to the corporation's coverage of the death of Neil Armstrong, the first man on the Moon.

In later years, he became an active member of the Sandgate Society, and a key player in the HG Wells Festival.

However, he found his strict rules had to be relaxed in order to appease a modern audience.

Speaking to KoS two years ago, he said: "I wanted people to write the stories by hand as a condition of entry to address the low standard of literacy and handwriting these days."

"It's an important art in itself and many of our most famous authors find that's the best way to do creative writing. My aim in offering the £1,000 prize was to get people to mimic what HG Wells did in the 1900s."

Organisers of this year's awards said: "His death is a great loss to many as he was a great man. Our thoughts are with his family."

Nick Spall, fellow of the British Interplanetary Society, added: "He was the astronaut who never made it to the Moon."

He leaves behind his wife Margaret and their two sons.

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Probe into gun death

A MAJOR police investigation was launched on Tuesday night when a 32-year-old man died after being shot in Dartford.

Kevin McKinley was found with gun shot wounds at around 8pm on Overy Street after reports of a shooting. He was rushed to hospital but died of his injuries.

At the time of going to press, four people had been arrested by officers. Anyone who may have any information should contact police on 101.

➔ Meet the commissioner

POLICE and Crime Commissioner Ann Barnes is staging the first of a series of 'meet the commissioner' events in Maidstone this week - with anyone interested in policing invited to attend.

The aim is to give the public the opportunity to raise issues directly with the elected PCC.

This week's event takes place on Wednesday at Oakwood House at 6.30pm. To book a place visit www.kent-pcc.gov.uk.

➔ Hit guitarist dies at 72

ROCK musician Rick Huxley, one of the founding members of 1960s chart sensation The Dave Clark Five, has died. He was 72.

The bass guitarist, who was born in Dartford, had been battling emphysema after years of heavy smoking.

He joined the band in 1958 after responding to a small ad placed by Dave Clark. He would be a key member of the band during its hey-day with hits such as Glad All Over and Bits and Pieces, until it split in 1970. He would go on to work for Dartford-based amplifier manufacturers Vox.

RENOWNED artist JMW Turner is to be the focus of a new movie by acclaimed director Mike Leigh.

And in order to develop inspiration for the big screen production, Mr Leigh has paid a visit to the Turner Contemporary gallery in Margate - which is named after, and displays a number of works by, the artist.

The film is to star Timothy Spall - best known for his roles in Secrets & Lies and the Harry Potter films as Peter Pettigrew - who will portray the artist whose landscapes and seascapes of Kent elevated him into art's elite.

Mr Leigh said: "Turner as a character is compelling. I want to explore the man, his working life, his relationships and how he lived. But what fascinates me most is the drama that lies in the tension between this driven eccentric and the epic, timeless world he evoked in his masterpieces."

The production, which remains untitled, will be co-financed by Focus Features International, the British Film Institute and Film4.

News of the film has been met with excitement at the Turner Contemporary.

Director Victoria Pomery said: "We've known for a while about the production of this film and are thrilled it is being made. Turner is one of the nation's most popular painters."

Ms Pomery also revealed that the director had been in contact with the gallery.

"Mike Leigh attended the opening of our Turner and The Elements exhibition last year. There is a huge public appetite for art and JMW Turner had an amazing and eventful life."

Alison Thompson, co-president of Focus Features International, added: "We're looking forward to this new venture with Mike, whose unique style and storytelling is bound to deliver a compelling and beautiful film."

POLITICS

Can red rose ever take root here again?

SPECIAL REPORT: Labour may lead the opinion polls, but in Kent the landscape has never been more true blue. But as Marijke Cox and Nick Ames exclusively reveal, Ed Miliband has a plan...

LABOUR Party leader Ed Miliband is drawing up a battle plan in a bid to gain his party a foothold once more in the county's Tory dominated political landscape.

Shadow chancellor Ed Balls revealed to this newspaper that plans were already being drawn up to make Kent a priority target as they look to break the Coalition's hold on power when the nation heads to the polls for the General Election in 2015.

However, for many it faces a near impossible task. The party has no MPs in the county and control of only one of Kent's 13 district or borough councils.

When the nation last went to the polls in 2010, Labour's foothold in the county – established during Tony Blair's 1997 landslide – was washed away with the loss of seven MPs.

Instead it became almost entirely dominated both at Westminster and in town halls across the county by the Conservative Party.

But with a strong lead in current opinion polls, Labour's leadership say they can sense blood.

Mr Balls said two seats – Dover and Deal, and Chatham and Aylesford – were now their main targets, although he stressed there were no "no-go" areas.

He said he would be taking a "personal interest" in the Dover seat, which was lost by Labour MP Gwyn Prosser in 2010, to Charlie Elphicke.

Mr Balls said: "It is a big problem for Labour that we have no Kent MPs, but that fact is also a problem for Kent. Dover, Medway and Thanet have all had Labour members in recent years and we want to build on that."

But Tory MP Charlie Elphicke hit back at Mr Balls' confidence: "There's no point looking to him or his party for any answers or solutions."

"Whether Labour is dead in Kent is a matter for the voters to decide."

Even the more optimistic Labour supporter will question whether the party is capable of turning such a strong tide.

During the 2010 election campaign, big hitters such as the then-Prime Minister Gordon Brown made visits to the county in a bid to bolster campaigns, but it failed to work with voters turning their backs on the party.

In the last election, the Conservatives gained seats in Chatham and Aylesford, Dartford, Dover and Deal, and Gillingham and Rainham.

They also won in Sittingbourne and Sheppey, Rochester and Strood, and Thanet South.

In these seats Tory candidates replaced sitting Labour MPs, but with boundary changes since the 2007 election the constituencies already technically had Conservative majorities.

A key opportunity to gauge Labour's recovery so far will be in May, when the county council elections take place.

The current political make-up of County Hall is dominated by more than 70 Tory seats compared to just three for Labour. It presents a clear sign of the scale of the problem Labour faces.

Mike Eddy, Dover councillor and former Labour leader at Kent County Council – who lost his seat in 2009 – said the party was at an all time low in 2009/10 when the Tories took the majority of the seats at KCC.

He said: "Voters were fed up, but I think what really did the damage was the expenses scandal; Labour was blamed for allowing that to happen."

"Whether that's right or not is immaterial – we were in charge when the expenses scandal broke."

"The economic situation was also deepening at that time. Everybody wanted to blame Gordon

BIG PLANS: Ed Miliband has set his sights on success in the county

Brown. People's voting decisions are less determined by the local party and instead by what the party is doing as a whole.

"We would certainly expect to radically improve our performance in the next county council elections. We've taken back Gravesham Borough Council and Thanet has a Labour leadership, which shows positive movement."

"We'll take some seats back in the General Election; how many, I wouldn't like to say."

But while Labour is gearing up for a fight, others believe Kent will stick to its traditional blue roots.

Veteran Tory MP Julian Brazier, who represents Canterbury, said he felt the county would always be leaning to the right politically.

He explained: "I think it would be over-confident to say it will be blue forever, but I feel the majority of people in the county realise if we want to compete as a country we can't go back to the Labour policies of big spending, high tax and high borrowing," he said.

The Electoral Calculus uses opinion polls and boundary changes to calculate the winners of individual UK seats.

Its latest findings suggest Labour prospective parliamentary candidate Clair Hawkins would win Dover, gaining 46 per cent of the vote.

Ms Hawkins said: "The economy is flatlining, there is high unemployment, few opportunities and little hope. But we still need to rebuild trust in our party, both in Dover and Deal and further across Kent."

Along with Dover, the other targeted seat for Labour is Chatham and Aylesford where Tristan Osborne is looking to overturn a 6,069 majority held by Tracey Crouch.

Again the Electoral Calculus is in favour of his chances, although only slightly.

He said: "I am optimistic about our prospects. We are ahead in the opinion polls, I have a good organisation behind me and this Government is split and dithering."

Rising star within the Tory ranks, Mark Reckless, is predicted to retain his Rochester and Strood seat.

He said: "In order to mount any sort of comeback Labour needs to accept it got things wrong such as spending and borrowing, as well as loosening its grip on immigration."

Despite Labour's pledge to challenge the Tories, the party was recently dealt a blow after one of its future high hopes defected to Ukip.

Angharad Yeo – the daughter of Labour stalwart Harriet Yeo – missed out on selection for Labour in an upcoming by-election for Ashford Borough Council. She then defected and is now contesting the same election for Ukip.

Harriet Yeo stood as the Labour candidate in the Police and Crime Commissioner race and is vice chair of Labour's National Executive Committee, as well as a serving borough councillor in Ashford.

Her daughter, 34, said: "I'd been campaigning for Labour since I was 17, but I started to realise nothing was being done. Labour is especially wary of tackling subjects such as immigration."

"The party has become stagnant."

Her mother Harriet said: "She feels strongly about a referendum on Europe and thinks this is the best way to achieve this."

"I think we should have a referendum too, however I'm sticking with Labour, I've invested more years in the party than her."

"I'm a mother first and then a politician so I'm very proud of her."

Ukip leader Nigel Farage, from Westerham, said it wasn't just right-wing parties defecting to the party.

"What her defection shows is despite national media showing Tories moving to support Ukip, we're actually getting support from across the spectrum."

"We're delighted to have her."

Butcher fears horsemeat imports scandal will continue to escalate

Exclusive by Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

MORE revelations could be on the way to further hit the beleaguered meat industry, according to a leading Kent butcher.

Family business JC Rook & Sons has 13 stores across the county and has been trading locally-sourced produce for 48 years.

And it says it has cashed in this month as shoppers turn their backs on supermarkets tainted by selling beef products contaminated with horsemeat.

Director Christopher Rook said he was stunned when the news broke: "I was very surprised when I heard what was taking place within our industry."

"The supermarkets make such a big play on how they check and double check supplies. Then you have something like this. It affects sellers, suppliers and abattoirs and it's implying that we, as an industry, are dishonest."

"I don't think we have heard the half of it, to be honest."

"You can get dragged into it as a

SCHOOL DINNERS CHECKED BY COUNCIL

In the aftermath of the revelations, an investigation ensured that horsemeat is not being served at any of the schools in which catering takes place under Kent County Council's remit.

Of 600 schools across the county, 230 use KCC's contracted suppliers – all five of which have confirmed their meat sources are uncontaminated after being contacted by council officers.

KCC emphasised that very little processed meat is on its school menus and most served is fresh.

In Medway individual schools are responsible for catering.

The Food Standards Agency has launched a programme to investigate where products contaminated with horsemeat have been distributed. Tests for horse DNA are being carried out on processed beef products – including in schools, hospitals and care homes.

business. But we have always used locally-sourced produce where possible. Our lamb and beef; it comes from Kent."

Mr Rook said he has seen an increase in trade in his stores and expects that to continue over the short and medium term.

He said: "Lots of people are talking about this issue when they shop with us."

"It will be interesting to see what happens regarding the price of beef. If it suddenly rises that will be an indication of how much foreign produce is going into processed meat."

Mr Rook's wife Julie, who is also on Kent County Council, added: "Because we make everything ourselves we know what ingredients go into our sausages and pies."

"The problem with supermarkets is that they want everything as cheaply as possible to maximise profits and so squeeze the producers to a point where they have to start cutting corners to keep supplying at the prices offered."

Local food producers are more accountable when it comes to supplies said Edwyn Martin, manager of Produced in Kent which promotes the county's growers.

He said: "Locally-sourced food and drink contribute significantly to long-term food security and food safety but more can be done."

"Agriculture should play a full and recognised role in the life of the nation. Buying local is good for the economy, good for the environment and good for you."

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Taste of Kent winners

JUDGES of the county's foremost food and drink awards have completed their deliberations ahead of the winners being announced next month.

Presentation of the Taste of Kent Awards, organised by local food champions Produced in Kent, will take place at the Mercure Great Danes Hotel near Maidstone on March 8.

One of the judges, James Beaton, said: "The standard of entries was incredibly high."

➔ Free ticket ballot ends

ENTRY to the ballot to secure free tickets to the county's top attractions and experiences closes on Monday.

The popular My Kent Big Weekend event takes place over March 23-24 with more than 17,000 tickets up for grabs at more than 100 venues.

Tickets are allocated by ballot with the closing date of midnight on Monday, February 18. See www.mykentbigweekend.co.uk.

Concern cap on care funding could be finished before it has begun unless date set for reforms

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

CAMPAIGNERS fighting for fairer funding for elderly care have demanded ministers set a date for when radical reforms will come into force.

They warn the Government's predicted timeframe of four years could mean plans thrown out in 2015, if another party comes into power following the General Election.

This week, ministers set out plans for long-term funding, including a cap on care costs of £75,000 – more than double the amount suggested by the Dilnot Commission.

Recommendations were for a cap of £35,000, meaning an individual would pay for their own care up to this total – possibly funded by an insurance policy taken out while still in work – and once they have contributed this amount would be eligible for state support.

But instead the cap has been set far higher

CAMPAIGNER:
KCC's Paul Carter

CARTER CALLED FOR CUTS

KCC leader Paul Carter had demanded the Government cut foreign aid and EU budgets and divert funds to elderly people to stop them having to sell their homes to pay for care.

He said the current funding system was "not up to the job" and insisted the crisis be resolved.

These latest reforms will cost £1 billion to implement, funded by a freeze on the inheritance tax threshold at £325,000 by three years from 2015/16.

Health secretary Jeremy Hunt called it a "watershed moment" for the country.

"These historic reforms will give everyone the protection they want in their old age and save the family home," he said.

with critics warning it would not stop the crisis of elderly people having to sell their homes to pay for care.

Andrew Dilnot, who led the commission, said it was "higher than we would have wanted".

Another major reform involves the means-tested support threshold increasing from £23,250.

Currently, anyone with assets more than that amount has to bear the cost of their own care. But ministers have now set out proposals to raise this to £123,000.

Campaigners welcomed the move, but criticised the Government for its failure to commit to a date for the plan to come into force.

Kent County Council leader Paul Carter has been pushing for some form of commitment that recommendations are implemented by 2015, launching a government e-petition calling for a debate on the matter.

Pauline Turner, who lives in Cliftonville, has thrown her weight behind the drive, saying a date needs to be set. Her mother suffered from Alzheimer's and went into a care home after the illness reached the point where she needed round-the-clock support.

The placement cost almost £20,000 a year and she had to put her house on the market, which was eventually sold at a much lower price due to pressure of care fee debt.

When she died, this amounted to £100,000.

"It's not moving very fast; I'm hoping the reforms are going to be implemented sooner than 2017," she said.

"If Labour win the General Election in 2015, then the plans could be thrown out and started again. They haven't said whether or not there is cross-party support on this.

"Leaving it until 2017 will just mean more elderly people having to sell their homes."

The 68-year-old said while she welcomed the change in threshold, she thought the £75,000 cap was "too high".

"I'm very worried about the elderly. We're not only seeing problems with care funding, but there are cuts to adult social care at Kent County Council.

"What impact is this going to have on people?

"There seems to be no firm commitment to help elderly people."

Support from county's Catholic leaders after Pope's shock departure

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

WHEN the Vatican confirmed on Monday morning that Pope Benedict XVI was to step down at the end of the month, the news was greeted with almost universal shock.

No Pope had resigned for more than 600 years, and there had been no hints over his decision in the days leading up to the announcement.

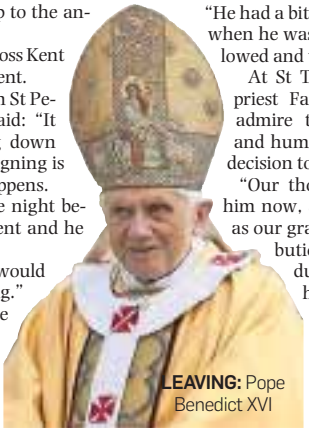

Unsurprisingly, Catholics across Kent greeted the news with amazement.

Father Geoffrey Pointer, from St Peter's Church in Maidstone, said: "It was a good job I was sitting down when you told me. A Pope resigning is not something that usually happens."

"I saw him on television the night before he made the announcement and he looked a bit drawn."

"He is fairly old and I know I would not have want to go on that long."

The 85-year-old became Pope Benedict XVI in April 2005, following the death of John Paul II. He confirmed his decision to resign was as a result of his declining health.

LEAVING: Pope Benedict XVI

At 78, the former Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger was one of the oldest new popes in history when elected. He took the helm as one of the fiercest storms the Catholic Church has faced in decades – the scandal of child sex abuse by priests – was breaking.

Father Pointer added: "I am a bit surprised and I am a little sad really. He was a good Pope, given his track record."

"He had a bit of a reputation as a Rottweiler when he was in another office, but he melted and we all got to love him."

At St Thomas of Canterbury, parish priest Father David Caine, added: "I admire the Pope's wisdom, courage and humility in making this important decision to retire."

"Our thoughts and prayers are with him now, and a certain sadness, as well as our gratitude for his immense contribution to the Catholic Church during his pontificate, and wish him every happiness in his retirement."

The Most Reverend Peter Smith, the Archbishop of Southwark, which covers Kent, preferred not to make a comment.

Sacred calling or a life sentence, this decision shows progress being made MONARCHS and popes have long assumed theirs is a sacred office which must be held until death. They are called by God to hold office and must do so until they die.

Abdication has usually been regarded as shameful.

Pope Benedict is a highly intelligent man. He also watched his predecessor becoming gradually more and more incapacitated towards the end of his long time as Pope.

Perhaps he reached the decision then that popes should be allowed to retire if this happens. After all he was himself one of the key decision-makers when Pope John Paul was becoming increasingly frail.

Two further points: people are living longer and longer.

Is it reasonable, then, to expect anyone today, whether pope or monarch, to remain in office until death?

The longer we live, the more this sounds like a life sentence rather than a sacred calling.

And secondly, in a world of 24-hour news, monarchs, popes and archbishops are subject to constant criticism.

Pope Benedict has not escaped. He has been accused – fairly or unfairly – of anti-Semitism and covering up clerical sex-abuse.

Now well into his 80s, he must find this deeply burdensome.

So, I think his decision to retire is a wise and godly one.

CHOOSING A NEW LEADER – SO WHAT HAPPENS NEXT?

CONFIRMATION of the Pope's decision to step down this week set in motion a centuries-old process of choosing his replacement.

Ultimately, the decision will be made by the College of Cardinals, the Catholic Church's most senior figures. All will be summoned to meet at the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican in what is known as a conclave.

There will be some 117 cardinals who will gather to select the Pontiff. They will be isolated from the outside world and vote twice daily, following discussion, as to who they believe would be a suitable replacement.

There will be no shortlist, but tradition dictates one of the cardinals will emerge victorious. The winning candidate must secure two-thirds of the vote, plus one.

After each vote the ballot papers are burned and the colour of the smoke determines to the outside world whether a decision has been made.

Black means discussions are on-going; white, that a decision has been made.

The new Pope will be in place by Easter.

NHS merger put on hold as high death rates are tackled

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A PLANNED merger between two NHS trusts has been put on hold in the wake of revelations over high death rates.

Medway NHS Foundation Trust, which runs Medway Maritime Hospital in Gillingham, was due to merge with Dartford and Gravesham NHS Trust.

But concerns over high mortality rates at the Medway trust has seen plans temporarily halted.

It is one of nine in the country to be investigated following the damning report into the Stafford Hospital scandal, where hundreds are thought to have died due to poor care.

Ministers on the NHS Commissioning Board revealed it would be launching a probe after figures in 2011 found the Medway trust had 1,745 deaths in a year – 238 more than expected.

A Medway trust spokesman confirmed they had requested a temporary pause of the assessment by Monitor – the regulator of NHS foundation trusts – into the proposed integration with Dartford and Gravesham.

They added: "The trust recognises it needs time and space to fully focus on the National Commissioning Board (NCB) review on Hospital Standardised Mortality Ratios (HSMR) and ensure integration is based on solid foundations.

"The trust has already made progress against its own plan to drive down HSMR and welcomes the NCB review.

"It is understood this national process is likely to take three to four months. When the NCB review timeline is clearer, the trusts will be better able to estimate a time for resuming the Monitor process. The Medway trust board has agreed to consider requesting reinstatement of the formal integration process no earlier than June 2013."

NHS medical director, Sir Bruce Keogh, will lead the probe into mortality rates at the Medway trust.

Death rates are calculated by looking at the number of people expected to die when taking into account the age and disease statistics of the local population.

The trust came in the bottom 12 of all 145 English hospital trusts at the end of last year. But it said it is doing all it can to ensure patient care.

An NHS spokesman said: "Over the past 10 years, the trust's mortality rates have been steadily decreasing despite it seeing significantly more patients but its HSMR remains higher than the national standard. Quality of care and treatment is paramount at Medway and many quality of care markers show the trust is delivering good standards.

"Incidences of pressure ulcers and falls in hospital are in line with or better than national rates, and continue to improve, and infection rates are some of the lowest in the south of England.

"As part of ongoing investment in patient safety, in October 2012 we invested in extending the critical care outreach team to improve the response to deteriorating patients 24/7."

Sir Bruce said the purpose of his investigation was to assure patients, public and Parliament that the hospitals under scrutiny understand why they have a high mortality rate and have all the support they need to improve.

"This will be a rigorous process, involving patients, clinicians, regulators and local organisations," he added.

The other eight trusts are: North Cumbria University Hospitals; United Lincolnshire Hospitals; George Eliot Hospital; Buckinghamshire Healthcare; Northern Lincolnshire and Goole Hospitals; the Dudley Group; Sherwood Forest Hospitals and Burton Hospitals.

EVENT

Jessie J and Plan B top the bill at star-studded Sound Island Festival

By Joe Bill

joe.bill@archant.co.uk

A HOST of big names from the pop world were this week confirmed to headline the Sound Island Festival in Thanet this summer.

The popular two-day event will see headliners Jessie J – recently a judge on BBC One talent show The Voice – and rapper turned movie star Plan B.

The event takes place in the grounds of Quex Park in Birchington.

On Saturday, July 27, soul singer, screenwriter, director and rapper Plan B will top the bill ahead of special guest performances from Rita Ora as well as the 2012 X Factor winner James Arthur.

On Sunday, July 28, boy bands Lawson and X Factor finalists Union J will perform on the bill topped by chart-topper Jessie J.

The line-up is considered to be far more pop orientated than last year's event which saw a throwback to the days of Britpop on the Saturday, with a line-up which included the likes of the Inspiral Carpets, James, Cast, The Farm and Echo & The Bunnymen.

In previous years, artists such as Madness, the Pussycat Dolls, and X Factor's JLS and Olly Murs have all starred at the venue.

A Sound Island Festival organiser said: "We felt the demand to see artists who are 'hot right now' justifies extending that sound over the two days to create a more contemporary feeling to the festival, but retaining Saturday's edgier feel with Plan B, Rita Ora and James Arthur."

Tickets are on sale now and available from the box office on 0871 224 1112, website: www.gigantic.com or from Margate Winter Gardens.

TUNED IN: Rita Ora (left) will join headline acts Jessie J (top) and rapper Plan B (below) at this year's Sound Island Festival at Quex

No repeat of queue woes

ORGANISERS have vowed to resolve some problems which dogged last year's event.

Small bar areas resulted in huge queues and waiting times of more than an hour to buy drinks.

A festival spokesman said: "I understand there were a few complaints about the set up of the drinks bars and food vendors last year, resulting in massive queues and emergency procedures brought in."

"Obviously, as with all big music events, some queuing is inevitable, but last year's problem was a one-off in a long history of running the Sound Island Festival and was caused on the first day only by a logistical problem which meant our full allocation of bars did not arrive in time."

"We're fully aware of the situation and certain we will not have that same issue reoccur."

Foxes need educating not culling, says animal welfare expert as baby attack reopens debate

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A SAVAGE attack on a four-week-old baby has reignited the debate over whether there should be a widespread cull of foxes in the UK.

A fox had entered the boy's home in Bromley and tried to drag him out before his parents intervened, but not before the animal had severed one of the child's fingers (see box).

As the boy continues to recover in hospital, discussion has once again returned to whether it is time something is done about the apparent rise in the number of urban foxes, lured to our towns by food and shelter.

Opponents of such a move, however, say such a move would achieve nothing.

They argue that "40 years of killing" between 1940-80 in London has had little impact on the species and that it would be no different now.

Educating society in how to deter foxes, they said, was the only way to tackle the problem.

John Bryant, who runs Tonbridge-based Humane Urban Wildlife Deterrence, said if the animal is culled in Little Dennie recovers in hospital after trauma

BABY Dennie Dolan (pictured) was savaged by a fox at his Bromley home last week.

His mother walked in after hearing screams to see the baby's arm in the jaws of the fox's mouth.

His hand was so badly bitten one of his fingers was severed although surgeons were able to reattach it.

It comes almost three years after nine-month-old twins Lola and Isabella Koupparis were mauled by a fox in east London. Both girls suffered arm injuries and one had facial urban areas, countryside foxes will simply move into the empty lairs.

SCAVENGER: There have been calls to cull urban foxes after Bromley attack

He said: "Foxes are everywhere; they are in the Kent countryside, the Welsh mountains, Downing Street – if foxes are removed, more will just move in.

"They will go into houses if you leave a door open, they will go into food larders. They are scavengers.

"And if opted for a cull what could you do? You couldn't spread a disease because foxes are canines and it could spread to dogs. Or would you mass poison?

"No-one wants to see a whole species of wild animal wiped out.

"Boris Johnson said something needs to be done and the automatic reaction is 'there needs to be a cull'.

"What needs to happen is people need to be educated in how to deter foxes and this will educate foxes."

Mr Bryant said people should be careful when putting rubbish out, to pick up fallen fruit from the garden, not to leave scraps of food outside and to secure caged animals such as chickens, guinea pigs and rabbits.

"Foxes are scavengers, if they are able to take these animals away it's as easy for them as going to Tesco," he said.

"It's the responsibility of the owners to make sure their animals are secure."

Mr Bryant says he educates foxes rather than harms them.

He said: "For example, I'll install a system that sprays water when a fox goes near. They quickly learn where they can and can't go."

The RSPCA also added its support against a cull, stating that attacks on humans were "extremely rare".

But Bromley councillor Tim Stevens said urban foxes were a "big problem".

He said: "There could be a case for a limited cull of foxes, it depends on making sure all the boroughs, and indeed the neighbouring boroughs from Kent and Surrey, get together."

London Mayor Boris Johnson said the latest attack needed to serve as a "wake-up call" to councils responsible for pest control.

POWER

For first time since 9/11 public are invited back inside nuclear station

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

FOR more than a decade the doors to Dungeness Power Station have remained firmly closed to the public.

Hundreds of workers go in and out each day, but for everyone else it is a no-go area.

All of which only adds to the eeriness of Dungeness and its secretive nuclear plant, which looms up from the misty shingle banks.

But it hasn't always been this way.

Its information centre was once a popular destination for both inquisitive tourists and school trips – offering the chance to get a glimpse into a power source both feared and revered by recent generations.

But following the terrorist attacks on New York in 2001, security was stepped up, and the centre closed.

Fears over security, as well as the risk of a natural disaster such as an earthquake – as seen with devastating effect at the Fukushima power plant in Japan, two years ago – meant EDF Energy, which runs the plant, remained extra cautious about allowing public entry to the site.

But 12 years have passed and the restrictions have been lifted and with it, the opening of a new learning centre.

Station manager Martin Pearson said EDF had carried out a review as to how it could open the facility to the public again.

"There were security concerns after 9/11 so the visitor centre was closed. Then there was Fukushima," he said.

"They are very different events. In terms of 9/11, security has been enhanced. I'm not able to say more than that.

"With Fukushima, we know we can't have an earthquake of that magnitude here but we looked at what if we did. What's the worst situation and can we deal with it? We found that we have appropriate measures in place."

In March 2011, an earthquake measuring 8.9 on the Richter scale triggered a destructive 14 metre tsunami and subsequent explosions at the Fukushima nuclear power plant, claiming close to 20,000 lives across the east coast of Japan.

While an earthquake of that magnitude is unlikely here, Folkestone, near Dungeness, was hit by a tremor in 2007 measuring 4.3 on the Richter scale followed by a smaller quake in 2009.

Mr Pearson continued: "EDF carried out a re-

OPEN: Martin Pearson with June Ashton who will manage the Dungeness learning centre view as to what we could do to open up a centre – being closed is against the transparency policy."

The new learning centre will allow the public, including school children, to get a glimpse behind the scenes of the nuclear power station.

As well as an exhibition area, lecture room and training area, groups can book site tours.

"There's a genuine buzz about this, it's really exciting," he said. "It's particularly poignant as this year is the 30th anniversary of Dungeness' service in low carbon generation.

"We haven't even advertised the learning centre yet and we've already got schools calling up interested in coming in.

"This is a chance to see behind the scenes of a nuclear power station; whatever your view on nuclear power, the learning centre is interesting. It may also encourage young people to look at a career in science, technology and engineering."

FACT FILE

Construction of the Dungeness site started in 1966 and the plant first started producing power in 1983.

It employs more than 550 EDF staff and 200 contract workers, contributes £30 million to the local economy every year and produces enough power to supply 1.5m homes.

Dungeness A has been decommissioned and Dungeness B is earmarked for closure in 2018 although this could be extended until 2023 and possibly longer.

The plant was outlined for expansion in April 2009 among others across the UK with plans for the development of Dungeness C, but the then Labour Government removed it from the list citing environmental reasons and concerns over coastal erosion.

Folkestone MP Damian Collins has been campaigning to have this decision reversed.

Dungeness is a designated Site of Special Scientific Interest and is Britain's only desert.

FILM

A summer spent in splendid isolation

Chris Britcher reports on David Wise who lived alone for six weeks on an island off Medway Estuary

FOR most of us, the summer of 2012 was all about the excitement of the London 2012 Olympic Games.

For David Wise, however, it was about six weeks of living on a deserted island in the middle of the Medway Estuary during one of the wettest summers on record.

And now he's completed a film of his experience, a travelogue he recorded during his time on Darnet Ness, off Hoo, using a pinhole camera made from driftwood and a handheld video camera.

The feature-length film, Otherness: Forty Five Days on the Isle of Beauty, is now available to view online in its entirety.

The 44-year-old artist said: "The Isle of Beauty of the title was actually the name of a pub that used to operate on the island in the 19th century, when the estuary was alive with cement and brickworks.

"The pub would have been just 100 metres from where my tent was pitched and its name sums up perfectly how I feel about Darnet.

"It really is a beautiful island, a jewel in the middle of the Medway.

"My intention was to survive on fishing, and plants I'd gathered from the island, but I quickly learnt that although catching sea bass was easy if you had the right bait, I didn't actually like taking life. From then on I lived on basic supplies I'd brought with me like rice and lentils, to which I added plants I found on the island.

"At the end of my time there I found that I'd dropped a few pounds in weight and was healthier than ever.

"I'd recommend making wild food a part of your diet to everyone."

Occasionally taking his canoe out and exploring the estuary as far as Sheerness, he would sometimes go as far as Redskin Bay, home to a large seal colony.

"When I was on the island a seal would come past and stay just offshore every second or third day, so she became interesting company, and the Victorian fort that dominates the island was home to a barn owl, who kept the island rats in check.

"I didn't get as lonely as I thought I would. Friends visited occasionally, I kept myself physically busy with a daily gymnastic routine and a lot of beachcombing, and I spent time writing an in-depth journal.

"One day I even swam the two-kilometre channel between the mainland and the island, it was lovely and warm; the River Medway is a fantastic and much underrated spot for wild swimming."

The film captures the atmosphere on the island, meeting the seal, and a gale force wind which scared Mr Wise's dog so much she swam back to the mainland.

"Greenman Solar have recently become the first Solar company in the UK to become qualified to the prestigious Trading Standards, Buy With Confidence Accreditation."

Green power

Niko on his green energy business and why he believes solar technology is the way forward

Tell us a bit about you

I am by instinct and training a scientist and engineer, my career has taken me on an interesting path through heavy engineering, micro-electronics, computers, owning two very busy pub/restaurant/hotels and culminating in conceiving and growing Greenman Solar to be the well-respected and professional green energy business that it is. My wife Rachel and I have evolved our home and offices at Court Lodge in Kingsnorth to be one of the greenest in Kent.

I have a passion for British folklore and all things ancient and have constructed a full-size stone circle with perfect alignments to midsummer and midwinter, sunrises and sunsets.

What made you start your business?

We initially wanted to install a solar array at Court Lodge and were disappointed by the lack of knowledge and professionalism in this embryonic industry.

Tell us more about Greenman Solar

Greenman Solar is a company of professional mechanical and electrical engineers with a combined experience of more than 60 years. We have now installed more than 3,000 solar panels on homes, schools, farms, community centres and businesses all over Kent and beyond.

What are your special qualities?

Greenman Solar is in many ways unique in as we specialise only in solar technology and therefore have become highly skilled in the field. We take great pride in what we design and deliver and believe that every single one of our 200-plus customers would verify our impeccable credentials.

What are your business plans for 2013?

Despite dire predictions for the industry when the government cut tariffs, our business has gone from strength to strength. Much of our new business is through direct referral from a customer that we have already installed for.

What is your business philosophy?

To me a quote is a promise, and I never break a promise, whatever difficulties we encounter in a job, we never charge anything as extra. My team and I always make sure that we deliver well above and beyond what is expected of us.

What are your motivations for work?

Many people differentiate between their life and their work, I love what I do and find it very difficult to demarcate between the two. So I guess you could say that my motivation for work is one and the same as the one that makes me bounce out of bed every morning!

Where do you see yourself in five years?

We are already looking at expanding into other parts of the UK and have recently invented a potentially huge solar energy saving product for swimming pools, which we are starting to install in Europe over the next few months. ■

Murder victim's father delves into criminal underworld in desperate bid to solve crime

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THE elderly father of a man shot outside his home is making a final call for help to find his son's killer as the fifth anniversary of the murder approaches.

Scaffolder and father-of-three David O'Leary, 31, who lived in Lydden, near Margate, was shot in the neck and back after returning from a night out with his girlfriend on March 1, 2008.

No one has ever been charged with the murder.

Now the man's father, Daniel O'Leary, has written to Kent's Police and Crime Commissioner Ann Barnes, demanding a renewed focus on the killing.

And he admits he dipped his toes into the murky criminal underworld in Thanet in a bid to try and unlock the mystery – coming face-to-face with hired killers and a trade in guns.

Mr O'Leary, who lives in Garlinge, near Margate, said:

'I CAME FACE TO FACE WITH CONTRACT KILLERS'

After the shooting, Daniel O'Leary – who believes his son was killed by a hit man – launched a campaign to find the killer.

He offered a £500,000 reward for information, hired a private detective and even delved into the belly of the criminal underworld in Thanet, where he spoke to contract killers in a bid to solve the mystery.

Speaking to KoS this week, Mr O'Leary said: "I was told how it works; you can either hire someone to kill someone for you, or you can hire the guns and then give them back afterwards – I learned a lot.

"I could have had someone killed easily. I was scared after that, I felt in danger.

"I didn't want to get involved with all that, it's a different world I had to go into."

He said he became so afraid after carrying out his research he has now moved house with his wife and 13-year-old daughter.

He added: "I don't know that world, but I had to go into it to try and find information."

"This feels like my last attempt. I'm 73 years old and I think about this every day but I don't know if I can keep going on.

"My wife wants me to stop. I'm bipolar [previously known as manic depression] which is possibly the best thing to have as when I'm up, all I want to do is fight this. But when I'm down, it's not as easy."

Retired second-hand furniture salesman Mr O'Leary says since his son's death he has appealed to Kent Police to step up their efforts, but claims it has done no good.

Kent Police, however, has always insisted the force has taken the case extremely seriously.

Senior investigating officer DI Lee Whitehead said: "The death of Mr O'Leary has been the subject of a complex investigation and we have examined many lines of inquiry. The case is not closed and is the subject of regular analysis.

"We will examine any new evidence and we appeal to anyone who can provide fresh details to contact us on 101 or call Crimestoppers, anonymously, on 0800 555 111."

Mr O'Leary admits his own investigations have been something of an eye-opener: "There was a big gap between us. I found out a lot of things. He drove around in a Mercedes wearing a Rolex, he mixed with the criminal world."

Wingham Wildlife Park - So Much More Than Just Birds

Wingham Wildlife Park has been a feature in the Kentish country side since 1986 when it was known as Wingham Bird Park (a name which it is still known as by many locals). Valentine's Day 2013 however saw the 5 year anniversary of a pivotal time in the parks history. On 14th February 2008, Tony and Jackie Binskin took over the ownership of the park to try and turn the business around and make it one of Kents premier attractions.

Working on the improvements which have gone in to the park has been a monumental task with completion of the ambitious plans still being many years from appearing on the horizon. Tony explained, "We had planned to achieve our goal in 5 years, which is a point we reached a couple of days ago, however the more improvements we make and the more visitors we win back as a result... the more new species and different additions we are asked for!" Jackie added, "Originally additions such as the new indoor play area, which we hope to open next month were not things we had considered, but as we attract more families, especially in the winter we needed something for them to do in the dry."

Gone are the days where people would go there to see birds and farm animals. The development of the animal collection is having a huge impact on the park which can now consider itself as being a real contender for being Kent's favourite day out. In 2012 the park gave away tickets for the Kent Big Weekend (something which is happening again this year, so apply for your tickets before 18th February). At the end of this event Wingham Wildlife Park had more ticket applications than any other attraction in the county.

"2012 was a proud year for us following the Big Weekend because it really made us feel that all the time and effort which goes in to making the park so much better than it used to be is not going unnoticed." Tony said, "Being Kent's most sought after day trip is a huge achievement for us."

Since the park was taken over 5 years ago many of the facilities have been updated to make it a comfortable and fun day out for all the family (even electric go-karts and mini diggers have been added for little kids and big kids alike). If you couple this with the addition of many new species (some of which the only ones in Kent, and in some cases even Europe), it is easy to see why people flock to this gem in the country-side. Such animal additions include European Wolves, Tigers, Jaguars, Lions & Pumas (giving Kent a fresh choice of location to see their favourite big cats), Penguins, Flamingos, Crocodiles, Meerkats, Otters, Lemurs and much more (over 200 species)... Especially if you just remember the park from your childhood, give it another go and see what all the fuss is about this half term!

Street trader law finally gets nod from Commons

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

IT HAS taken six years, but tough new legislation to crack down on illegal street trading has finally been given the seal of approval by the House of Commons.

The Canterbury City Council Bill injects greater regulatory power into the local authority's arsenal over those selling goods on the city's streets. However, the new legislation fell short of granting council officers the right to confiscate goods.

Julian Brazier, the city's MP, said he is delighted that the legislation has finally been passed.

He said: "Canterbury has had a particular problem with street trading. It is at heart a mediaeval city, with narrow streets, yet at the same time it is the third most visited city in the country.

"The resultant congestion has been made worse by the numbers of illegal street traders operating beside the legitimate street traders – who have paid for a licence to trade.

"This bill will allow Canterbury City Council to tackle the problem of pedlars acting illegally as street traders."

At the heart of the regulations is to determine who is legitimately trading door-to-door, and those who use that as a cover to trade on the city's busy streets – much to the chagrin of the many legitimate traders who operate from stalls on the main thoroughfare.

Council staff said the old law – part of the 1871 Pedlar's Act

ACTION: MP Julian Brazier is pleased the city's street traders bill has finally been granted – made it difficult to prove someone was trading from a fixed point, rather than on the move.

Adds Mr Brazier: "There are traders who are licensed and pay tax, so are part of the whole system. But they are being undercut by those acting illegally. They were selling everything from scarves, food, children's toy and souvenirs.

"The act will make sure that everyone obeys the law in the future."

Along with the Canterbury bill, legislation was also passed for Leeds and Reading and the Government is now looking at something similar to be enforced nationally.

WESTGATE TOWERS TRAFFIC

A full structural survey of Canterbury's Westgate Towers will be taking place from Sunday until Tuesday – bringing a final flurry of road problems before the controversial traffic trial is scrapped.

The towers were closed to through traffic last year for a trial period amid fears that the ancient monument could be damaged and in a bid to cut down on air pollution.

But it met with huge criticism and traffic jams, which prompted Kent County Council to demand the trial be scrapped in March.

However, that has met opposition too, with more than 30 local businesses signing a letter supporting the trial.

This Sunday the road to the side of the towers will be closed to traffic between 8am and 4pm.

There will be no through access between St Peter's Place and St Dunstan's Street/North Lane. Diversions will be signposted and motorists are advised to leave more time for their journeys.

NO TRAFFIC: Westgate Towers will undergo a 3D laser scan this week

Then on the Monday and Tuesday, the survey work will continue without the need for the road to be closed.

The work is being undertaken by Canterbury City Council.

A spokesman said: "The towers were last surveyed around 15 years ago, so the inspection will allow the council and English Heritage to update their records on the towers' condition.

"The work, which includes a 3D laser scan, has been planned as part of the trial closure of the road underneath the towers."

Historic gospels play key role in ceremony

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

WHEN the eyes of millions fall upon the Archbishop of Canterbury as he is enthroned within Canterbury Cathedral next month, beneath his fingers will be one of the most precious relics of Christendom.

The ceremony on March 21 will be witnessed by some 2,000 people in the historic building and beamed live on the BBC, with VIPs such as the Prime Minister and Prince of Wales expected to attend.

And when the new archbishop, Justin Welby, takes his oath he will lay his hands on a Bible which is believed to have once belonged to the first man to be Archbishop of Canterbury – St Augustine; who arrived on these shores in AD597.

St Augustine's Gospels – sometimes called the Canterbury Gospels – is an illustrated Latin text which originates from Italy and is currently in the possession of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. It is part of the tradition of the enthronement of a new archbishop that the manuscript is used for his swearing in ceremony.

Dr Christopher de Hamel is fellowship librarian of the college and has the responsibility of bringing the priceless artefact to Canterbury for the event.

"It is the oldest surviving book known to have been in England and the earliest known illustrated work," he said. "It consists of the Latin text of the gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. According to Bede when St Augustine arrived in England to spread Christianity he had been given all the books necessary for his task by Pope Gregory I.

Picture: PAUL JERRETT

EVENT: Canterbury Cathedral will host the historic scrolls for the ceremony

"One cannot be certain, but it is overwhelmingly probable and accepted that this work belonged to St Augustine. It is a venerable item, evocative of the earliest days of English history and the Church."

For centuries the book was housed in St Augustine's Abbey, Canterbury. But it became part of an important collection of Anglo-Saxon Christian works collected by 16th century Archbishop of Canterbury Matthew Parker, who was tasked by Elizabeth I to gather materials showing England had its own church prior to 1066.

Politically at the time, this was important as the country was frequently in conflict with Catholic mainland Europe.

Parker assembled a library which he bequeathed to Corpus Christi, the college he had previously been master of.

"The gospels are housed in a carefully controlled vault," said Dr de Hamel. "If I am asked how much the work is worth in monetary terms I cannot say. How much is Canterbury Cathedral worth? Or Stonehenge? What about the pyramids?"

"The enthronement has the sense of a spiritual occasion. This is a very, very old object which has a living function, rather than just being an antiquity. It was put together as a sacred object and is still performing that function close to 1,500 years later. I find that rather moving."

OPINION

Vital issue we must all warm to

Graham Gibbens highlights that being able to keep warm in winter can be the difference between life and death for our most vulnerable

YOU may well have noticed the Keep Warm Keep Well campaign being advertised around the county during the last few weeks.

If you haven't, it's well worth taking a look.

The idea is to provide information to people who are more at risk in the colder, winter weather.

While this might not be thought of as dramatic work, it can have a particularly important impact on the health and well-being of some of the county's more vulnerable people.

I'm particularly conscious that while many of us have started looking forward to spring, the latest cold snap – and forecasts of more to come – will leave many older people anxious about their heating bills, as well as their ability to get out and about.

We know that for those who are over 70, or who have existing heart or lung problems, the risks that come with cold weather can be particularly significant.

At the risk of sounding melodramatic, spending more than two hours at 12°C raises blood pressure and increases the risk of heart disease and stroke, while being exposed to cold temperatures can lead to an increased risk of bronchitis, pneumonia and other viruses.

In fact, for every degree the temperature drops below 18°C, deaths in the UK go up by nearly 1.5%.

That is why the Keep Warm Keep Well campaign has been so important.

Late last year, Kent County Council got together with the NHS in Kent in an attempt to draw attention to the risks and help people to find out what help is available.

Keep Warm Keep Well, as a campaign, was designed to get information and advice to those who need it – and encourage family and friends to look out for older and vulnerable people who need someone to look out for them during the colder months.

Through organisations called Home Improvement Agencies, more than 300 visits have been made across the county to those in need with anything from blankets to boiler checks.

And the NHS has done a great job providing advice and services in the county's doctors surgeries and hospitals – including some fantastic information cards that double up as room thermometers.

It's also been really good to see some of our young people helping spread the message.

Pupils at Maidstone Grammar School for Girls and at St Simon Stock School have filmed experiments to help show how important it is to wear warm clothing, both indoors and out.

And there are pages on the Kent County Council website –

All this work is being done to help those who could be at risk which can be found at www.kent.gov.uk/winter – that provide information about staying well at home.

All this work is going on because something can be done to help those who could otherwise be at risk.

So, even as we get further into the new year, I would ask all of those involved in supporting family, friends and neighbours to stay alert to the risks right through until the spring takes hold.

And, indeed, I hope we can repeat some of this year's fantastic work when next winter comes around.

For now, even as the brighter days are calling, I would simply urge everyone to look out for those around them who might still be vulnerable this winter.

■ Graham Gibbens is the cabinet member for adult social care and public health at Kent County Council.

KOS COMMENT

Why democracy needs a wide range of colours

IT WOULD be a brave soul to suggest the political make-up of the county is going to be anything other than true blue for generations to come.

The county has been a staunch Tory heartland for so long now, it is hard to see how that will ever change – despite the occasional splash of red or yellow.

But regardless of your politics, the Conservative domination of the county, however much it may be supported, is so suffocating there is a strong argument to suggest it stifles debate; that it has a negative impact on promoting the healthy democracy in the corridors of power, which is only achieved by a diversity of opinions and ideas. All of which Kent deserves and needs to represent and serve us all.

Source meat locally

WHAT started as a bit of a joke has rapidly become an international scandal. The horsemeat fiasco shows no signs of slowing, but it does offer one solution. If food provenance is important to you, the simple solution is to buy local.

It will be fresh, what it says on the label, and helps boost the local economy too.

Gay rights chip at cornerstone

CONGRATULATIONS to Graham Wanstall of Dover for his excellent article (KoS letters, 03/02).

I agree gay marriage is unnatural and that the wishes of a very vocal minority are being imposed on the majority of us in an undemocratic way.

Marriage between a man and a woman is one of the cornerstones of our society and predates both the Church and the state. Neither of these institutions has the right to alter its meaning in such a fundamental way.

Last week's vote in the House of Commons, with more than half of the Conservative MPs failing to support the bill, demonstrates the strength of feeling about the issue.

I urge all readers who do not support gay marriage to keep up the pressure on their MP.

Malcolm Coates, Maidstone

Can we please drop subject?

I AM sick of reading about gays – and now a university academic has criticised David Attenborough's wildlife shows for not featuring enough gay animals.

Dr Brett Mills of the University of East Anglia says wildlife documentaries should be offering viewers a wider perspective on animal behaviour.

Who cares what sexual preferences they have?

What I do object to is the way it's continually put into the news by people who should allow us all to quietly live our lives.

John R. O'Neon, Folkestone

Just pleasing the minority

YET again our MPs vote according to their own wishes, not those of their electors.

We have a new generation of tyrants hurling playground taunts at those disagreeing with their views, trying to close down any debate.

They try to show us how wonderful, caring, modern and 'with it' they are by acceding to all demands made by minorities, while happily ignoring the wishes of the persecuted majority.

Flushed with recent successes, I wonder what else minorities have on their wish lists, all of which must be allowed unless we are to appear 'bigoted' and 'narrow minded'.

Phil Granger, West Malling

Working class deserve break

I WAS reading last week's story on the free nightclub entry for those who could produce a payslip, and could not help but comment on the local politician's views.

How can she say it is discrimination when the working-class population are taxed to the hilt by this Government?

Someone unemployed has long been more favourable than someone working.

Discounts have been enjoyed by the unemployed for years; council tax, free school meals, the list goes on.

So why, when someone is doing something good for the working class, can she jump up and say discrimination?

This is offering something back to the working class who otherwise might not be able to afford a night out on normal prices, whereas those on benefits seem to frequent the pubs day and night.

I hope this is the start of benefits available to those that actually work for a living.

John Potter, by email

Let's get this out in the open

I SUPPORT a debate into the future of Kent County Council expensive consultants followed by a 'consultation' with the outcome already built in.

Terry Cload (former KCC councillor), Pembury

Kill two birds with new flats

WHY keep waiting for the company who bought the Tunbridge Wells cinema site?

It has stood empty for more than 10 years already.

Why not turn it into flats so as to bring the housing waiting list down. I know it will be costly in the long run, but the council will get their money back on the rent.

PEH Coley, Tunbridge Wells

Cyclists need to get priority

AS ONE of Terry Hudson's published opponents, I thank him for his congratulations (KoS letters, February 10).

I am ready to congratulate him too on combining the proposal to build HS2, the introduction of 20mph speed limits, the encouragement of cycle lanes and equating David Cameron to Mao Tse-tung, all in one letter.

I do, however, happen to agree with him about HS2.

I think that it is David Cameron's vanity project and if it ever goes ahead will end up costing far more than predicted, as government projects always do, and once up and running will not deliver anything like the alleged benefits predicted.

But I have to (once again) disagree with Mr Hudson regarding cycle lanes.

Cyclists are a vulnerable group on our roads, so anything that can be done to make the roads safer for them should be welcomed; and if that means motorists have to slow down to accommodate them that is no bad thing.

It's a pity Mr Hudson seems to have the attitude car drivers should take precedence over every other road user. The fact is we could walk before we could cycle and we could cycle before we could drive cars.

So, following the same principle as marine vessels of 'sail before steam', motorists should be giving way to pedestrians, cyclists, etc. Most of us don't have a problem with that. Can Mr Hudson say the same?

Christopher Hudson-Gool, Maidstone and our district councils.

Little has changed since the substitution of committee systems with cabinet structures more than a decade ago. Tinkering with corporate governance may have marginally improved councilors' abilities to have an impact, but fundamental reforms are long overdue.

Councillor Simon Cook is right to highlight the management duplication and potential reduction in costs with fewer councilors if KCC was replaced by two unitary authorities in east and west Kent.

There is no reason why unitary authorities cannot come up with groundbreaking initiatives and although larger bodies might throw a weightier punch, there is also a far greater potential for expensive mistakes.

There are pros and cons, but let's have a meaningful debate with full weight being given to the views of residents.

Not a debate held behind closed doors with teams of IT'S awards season across the world right now, with the Baftas and the Grammys having already got the February season under way. But the big one is now just a week away, with stars and studios gearing up for the Oscars.

Up-and-coming illustrator Chris Brake will have a keen eye on the winners and losers at this year's Academy Awards.

The Rochester artist will have his work exhibited at San Diego's Hero Complex Gallery as part of its Oscars Legends! show.

The 27-year-old said: "It's the first time I have done an illustration exhibition. The curator, Adam Smasher, said he liked my work and invited me along. Basically, it's a celebration of the Oscars. They have brought artists from around the world to illustrate their favourite films – it can be anything that has won an Oscar.

"I have gone for One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest.

"We create our illustration and then there's a limited-edition print series of all the pieces so they can get sold over there. I think mine is one of 20."

Brake's pieces will then travel to Portland, Oregon, at the end of the month to be used in another exhibition alongside the gallery's annual Oscar gala event.

'I moved back to Kent and it became obvious I couldn't keep doing six-foot paintings in my bedroom'

The former Chatham Grammar School pupil studied art at Leeds University before returning to his native Medway to pursue a career in illustration.

"It was really by accident. I trained at Leeds and specialised in painting life-sized portraits of old people, basically.

"So they were all about six foot tall.

"After graduating, I moved back to Kent and it became obvious I couldn't keep doing six-foot paintings in my bedroom – they were just too large.

"I was involved in a group called Alternate Shadows, who are an amateur dramatics group in Rochester, and they asked me to do some posters for their shows. From then on I was getting into the practice of doing something in a different medium rather than oil paintings all the time.

"More people saw the posters and asked if I would do this and that. In the past year-and-a-half I have really started taking it seriously, making it more of a business, setting my website up and sending work around places.

"It has snowballed."

FOCUS:
 Brake has created art from album covers to television

Chris is Braking into the big time at Oscars show

Prestigious Academy Awards is backdrop for Rochester artist to showcase his work

Specialising in detailed pen-and-ink drawings, Brake's reputation has grown and the artist has produced work across the media, including album covers, T-shirts, posters, websites and magazines.

"Three or four times a year I will put a portfolio together and send it round to lots of companies and agencies, and off the back of that I hopefully get a few commissions to do a few bits and bobs for them.

"I don't go out and say 'This is what I am going to do' or 'Give me this job' – it's kind of the luck of the draw on what the company needs or wants at a certain time. It's good in a way because there are lots of different kinds of commissions and the next job is never the same as the last one."

Brake has worked for the likes of the John Lewis Partnership as well as creating a short animated advert for Channel Four's satellite station E4 called X-ray Specs.

"It's a good learning curve, as well. Every time you get a new job, there's something new you need to learn to complete it. Especially as I am early on in my career, certain clients may have specified something that they want and I may have never done it before so have to teach myself on the job.

"Then it's on to the next one, so my

'I've worked closely with Rochester Cathedral for the 200th celebrations of Dickens's birthday knowledge just expands from there."

You may have seen some of Brake's work on a trip to London as he has produced work for music-scene events company Bird On The Wire.

"That's one of the biggest clients I have worked for. It was a print ad-campaign that went in a lot of music magazines and got posterised all over east London, as well as on flyers."

But the Kent boy has not forgotten his roots, having produced illustrated maps of Rochester for tourists looking to join in the Charles Dickens celebrations last year.

"I've worked quite closely with Rochester Cathedral for the celebration of Dickens's 200th birthday.

"They did a stage show in the crypts of the cathedral and I designed the set and posters for that, as well."

The young artist is quite clear about his ambitions for the future, with America and the Oscars very much on his mind.

"I'd like to do more of the film side of things. There's a gallery over there called Mondo and I'd love to do one of their posters one day. They basically do alternative versions of film posters.

"The Academy Awards people are archiving all their stuff at the moment as they are considered one of the most important graphic-designing companies around."

But with his own piece already featuring in the US, it is surely only a matter of time before Chris Brake becomes a regular name on the illustrator exhibition list.

"It's a shame I can't get over there to see it, that's the only problem. I'm waiting for someone to have an illustrator exhibition in London so I can go and visit one of my pieces."

So you wanna be a record-breaker? Marco's here to give you a chance

Joe Bill meets the man behind the Guinness World Records Amazing Science Live Show, who reveals there is an awful lot more to getting your name in the famous book than meets the eye

WITH the London Olympics fading to a distant memory, there is now another place where fans can get their fix of athletes smashing world records... well, sort of.

The Guinness World Records group is touring its new show, Amazing Science Live, around the UK, giving audiences the opportunity to become record-holders themselves.

Marco Frigatti is the head of the records-management team and has worked for the group worldwide.

He said: "The show is a little bit of an overview of how records work. You get to see how we qualify records, what makes a world record and what doesn't."

"You also get to understand the science behind measuring a record."

"A lot of people don't realise when we receive a record application we need to look at the science behind it."

"For example, the loudest burp: how do you measure that? What kind of decibel will you be using, what kind of intensity?"

"Or the largest soap bubble. We had a huge bubble the other day and it has to be measured in volume. But because of its wonky and not very precise shape, we have to think of the science in the equation."

The show comes to the Assembly Hall Theatre in Tunbridge Wells this month, giving audience members the opportunity to set a record.

"It [the show] is informative, too –

WONDERS OF THE WORLD:

Marco Frigatti, right, has been working with the records team for the past nine years. From skateboarding dogs to the highest total of balloons burst by someone on a pogo stick, he's seen it all you find out the difference between duct tape and gaffer tape, or perhaps liquid nitrogen and why it smokes.

"Also people get to go on stage to attempt to break their own record. We will be recording the audience's loudest scream competing with the other locations on the tour."

"The record is measured live and they can see on the table where the audience scored, so there is some competition, too."

Fans can even have a go at firing smoke rings at targets in an attempt to break a world record live on stage.

"This tour we also give two children the opportunity to become official adjudicators for some record attempts, so they use the clipboard and stopwatch and can help out."

Frigatti has been working with the records team, which produces the famous annual, for nine years and is hugely excited by the new live show.

"I work behind the scenes for many months, so I only got to see it from the audience perspectives for the first time a few weeks ago. I found myself screaming to try to get on stage."

"It has been nine years of madness, but it wasn't a dream fulfilled – it was quite coincidental."

"I started working in the TV department with the Guinness World Records and then got involved in the verification of records – it really got me fascinated."

"You get to know these fascinating people who break records and why they want to do it, and what's the story behind it all. It's a little bit addictive... I can't get enough of it."

■ The Guinness World Records Amazing Science Live Show is at the Assembly Hall Theatre, Tunbridge Wells, on Thursday, February 28. Tickets cost £17 for adults and £15 for children. Visit www.assemblyhalltheatre.co.uk or phone 01892 530613 for tickets.

Garden expert joins our team to help you...

Dave Mairs introduces the old hand who will be sharing new techniques

YOU can eat better and spend less.

If such a claim sounds too good to be true, Jeremy Shirley, one of Kent's most experienced nurserymen, is confident he can convince you otherwise.

Jeremy – or 'Jerry', as he is known to his many friends across the county horticultural scene – came to fame through the establishment of Kent Country Nurseries at Challock.

The nursery blossomed under his expert hand, but one of the achievements of which he is most proud is the passing on of the gardening bug (in the nicest possible sense!) to his son Stephen, who now runs Victoriana Nursery Gardens, also in Challock.

Never one to rest on his spade, Jerry is still very much involved at Victoriana nursery, where more than 60 years of horticultural wisdom are brought to bear on another flourishing business.

And now Jerry has agreed to write for Archant KOS Media. Indeed, we are lucky enough to be getting double helpings!

Firstly, there will be a monthly column on the leisure section of the Kent News website (www.kentnews.co.uk/leisure), while in tandem with this will be features in our popular supplement, Homes & Gardens, the first edition of which this year will be coming out in March.

Jerry told Archant KOS Media: "I started growing at the age of nine in the late 1940s and am more than happy to impart my diverse knowledge, at times spiced with humour, common sense and ideas that work."

The articles will be focused wholly on the season and readers will be treated to some of the most up-to-date expertise in the county.

"February is very much the month for planning and planting, especially fruiting stock and the first protected sowings.

TIPS AND ADVICE: Jerry Shirley will be sharing his many years of gardening success with readers to help you eat good food for less

I will show you how to eat better and spend less," said Jerry.

Gardening information will obviously form the bulk of Jerry's writing, but much will be tailored to the growing (and eating!) of produce.

And it won't end there! Subjects as varied as wildlife and rural crime will be covered, and Jerry is never afraid to raise the hackles with his sometimes-contentious views.

See you all over on www.kentnews.co.uk/leisure! Visit Jerry's website at www.victoriananursery.co.uk for more on the nursery.

REVIEW MUSIC

BUZZCOCKS: Another Music In A Different Kitchen; Love Bites; A Different Kind Of Tension

AS older music fans never tire of telling young whippersnappers, the late 1970s really was a special time. Punk was doing its best to, if not rewrite the rock rule-book, then at least make a few safety-pinned amendments.

When the leading lights of the London scene started to spread their wings and play in venues up and down the country, they inspired bored teenagers across the land to start up their own bands.

Manchester was a particularly fertile ground for punk and, after Pete Shelley had travelled to the capital to see the Sex Pistols, his new band Buzzcocks debuted by opening for Rotten and Co when they travelled north.

Shelley's band became one of the most successful punk outfits and it wasn't long before their singles were being played on daytime Radio 1.

They stood out from the bondage crowd by writing about love and relationships (standard for every other performer... unusual for punks) while managing to sneak sexual ambiguity and exploration on to Top Of The Pops.

Buzzcocks had a wider popular appeal than, say, the Pistols and their most popular LP is probably Singles Going Steady, the stunning collection of 'pop punk' 45s that had made them a household name.

The band were prolific during 1978-

79, releasing three essential LPs that rounded out their story for anyone who could only hum the hits. Now all three have been re-released as 2CD packages, including rare tracks, Peel sessions, singles, demos and live recordings.

Buzzcocks' debut album, Another Music In A Different Kitchen, remains a punk landmark, fired by wit, speed and philosophical lyrics.

The follow-up Love Bites contains the bona fide classic Ever Fallen In Love (With Someone You Shouldn't've), while the companion CD contains what is perhaps the stand-out of the bonus material – a full June 1978 concert at Manchester's Lesser Free Trade Hall.

The final LP from the first incarnation of the band – A Different Kind Of Tension – is presented here with all the associated singles of the period, as well as the last track the group recorded in their first incarnation – I Look Alone.

This LP sees the band in more experimental mode, perhaps trying to avoid the punk trap of endlessly releasing what are in effect new versions of the same material. It is less 'pop' than some of their earlier material but none the worse for that.

Buzzcocks are often seen as a second-division act of the period, behind the Premier League stars of the Sex Pistols and The Clash, but perhaps the comparisons aren't really fair.

They had a sound of their own and tackled subjects their contemporaries pointedly ignored. These CDs will remind old hands just how vital and listenable the band were, while the uninitiated are about to hear their new favourite band.

A house in the country that is strangely, superbly different

Every now and again you come across somewhere that is a little quaint and a little unusual.

It's a good thing mostly as it keeps you on your toes and not bored of the same old styles of food and service. The Hempstead House – Country House Hotel in Bapchild is one of those places.

The Lakes Restaurant is decorated with a beautiful chandelier, white tablecloths and sparkling cutlery. It is befitting of the traditional-style country house in which it is set.

My guest and I (a chef) picked from a choice of breads including garlic, tomato and walnut and we were served an appetiser of a baked crostini topped with sun-dried tomato and Mozzarella, which was a little dry and not what I would pick to get the taste buds tingling.

With our waiters now clad in white gloves, the starters arrived. I went for the assiette of crab featuring a delicious crab pana cotta, crab cake and tempura crab with tomato and chilli jam.

It was excellent. The cake was fresh and contained more meat than bread, which meant it was juicy and not dry, while the jam gave zing.

My guest went for the pan-seared scallops, which we ascertained were from Scotland, with fennel purée, blood-orange pearls and orange-blossom foam. The presentation was good, while the nod of a head and the need to scoop up every last inch of sauce told its own story.

It's not so strange having classical music playing while you're eating, but Ride Of The Valkyries as your backdrop was a little strange.

Nevertheless, our main courses arrived with German-like precision and the white gloves returned, too. I went for the home-smoked venison served with celeriac purée, pickled red cabbage, pickled walnuts and a gin-and-juniper jus.

Again it was of very high quality. The pickled walnuts provided a sharp tang to the dish, with the venison cooked medium rare. The gin and juniper left a delightful, lasting taste.

My guest chose roasted poussin (young chicken) covered in smoked bacon and served with colcannon potatoes, wild mushrooms and Calvados cream. A quick taste revealed that the flavours of the smoked bacon had transferred beautifully to the poussin, while the plate was cleared to the strains of Flight Of The Bumblebee.

My guest finished with a warm plum frangipane tart served with cinnamon crème Anglaise (English custard to you and me) and a mulled-wine sorbet that went down very well.

I went for the selection of cheeses with celery, grapes and crackers. There were six cheeses, including a lovely Brie, a tasty Red Leicester and strong Stilton, generous portions all.

Our total bill for a very good meal and drinks came to £81.60.

The posh white gloves are a bit different, but I would have happily exchanged them for some interaction with the staff. This, though, is a place that definitely has a style of its own. I liked it.

New-look Cricketers steps up to the crease

THE Cricketers pub in Canterbury high street has reopened this month with a new look and a new landlady.

Proprietor Anita Turner said: "The Cricketers is a Shepherd Neame pub and we're renovating it back to its former glory as a good old English pub. We have sanded back the floor, the bar and the furniture so that everything is fresh and back to as it was.

"As well as real ales and a selection of beers, there will be a full wine list as well as Champagne and Prosecco by the glass."

The new menu will also be traditional and feature home-made pies, pulled pork and beef brisket sandwiches, as well as bar nibbles.

Food fair will take on Kentish craft mantle

WEST Kent organisational group Kentish Craft Fairs has announced a new event for 2013 – the Sevenoaks Food Fair.

Held at the Stag theatre in September, the two-day event will exhibit delicacies from the farms and kitchens of the county.

From farm fresh produce to meats, fish, sauces, preserves and baked goods, the food fair will bring in some of Kent's best boutique producers as well as established countywide retailers.

There are places still available if you would like to have a stall at the show. For more information, visit www.kentishcraftsfairs.co.uk.

at 50: still a thrill

If you have the need for speed and are looking for fast and furious fun, you can't beat karting.

Chatham's Buckmore Park International Outdoor Kart Circuit, just off junction 3 of the M2, is offering half-term Turn Up 'n' Drive sessions for children aged four to 16.

For children aged four to seven there are 15-minute sessions available on 5mph electric karts on the 120m Mini GP Circuit.

Children aged between eight and 11 (and at least 4ft 2in tall) can experience the 20mph petrol karts on the longer 300m Club Circuit.

Youngsters aged 12 to 16 can ride the state-of-the-art 40mph petrol karts available on the more complex 600m National Circuit.

Prices start from £15 per session.

Buckmore Park, which celebrates its 50th anniversary this year, still offers Kids' Karting parties for ages four to 16 throughout the year, as well as Laser Tag Parties for those aged eight to 16... and mums and dads, too!

Is your child the next Lewis Hamilton? The Bambino School for six- to seven-year-olds has welcomed more than 1,000 children since its introduction in 2009.

The circuit is open seven days a week and attracts more than 150,000 visitors a year. It operates late into the evening and caters for both children and adults, with 200 karts for hire. The sales office is open between 9am and 6pm Monday to Friday and 9am to 5.30pm weekends.

It's full steam ahead at transport festival

By Joe Bill

joe.bill@archant.co.uk

THERE will be trains, games and automobiles at this year's Medway Festival of Steam and Transport.

Hosted by Chatham's Historic Dockyard, the two-day event on Easter Sunday and Monday will get fans of historic machinery hot under the collar with exhibitions, entertainment and competitions.

There will also be a hint of showbusiness around the festival, with an opportunity to walk around the set of the BBC TV drama series Call The Midwife. The 1950s atmosphere will be re-created, with vehicles of the time, washing lines, bicycles and music of the era all adding to the backdrop.

In the main part of the transport fair, visitors can get up close to classic cars including marques and models from Austin, Ford, Rover and Wolseley. There will also be an appear-

CELEBRATION: From steam trains to a re-creation of the Call The Midwife set, the festival will have something for everyone ance from a Hillman Minx MK Villa that appeared in the BBC TV series and a 1954 Rolls-Royce State Landaulette.

All the usual elements of this popular event will be returning, including the sights, sounds and smells of steam as traction engines and locomotives rumble by, as well as folk and blues music, animal encounters and shire-horse wagon rides.

Watch out for the steam-punks with their unusual neo-Victorian costumes and steam-powered gadgets.

Visit www.thedockyard.co.uk/steamandtransport to find out more about the event.

Music festival is in tune with charity

By Joe Bill

joe.bill@archant.co.uk

POPULAR charity festival Music On The Hill returns for 2013 with an entertaining line-up of pop acts and reality-show stars.

The weekend event is organised by and raises money for Demelza Hospice Care For Children, Teens Unite Fighting Cancer and the Children's Development Trust. It will see the likes of Jools Holland, boy-band rockers McFly and pop star Peter Andre perform.

The show, which is held at Kings Hill, near West Malling, on Friday to Sunday, July 19-21, will also feature a special appearance from former Bucks Fizz members Cheryl Baker, Jay Aston and Mike Nolan.

The first Music On The Hill, in 2011, attracted more than 10,000 people and, despite a year off in 2012, event director Colin Thacker is confident of repeating the success. He said: "We

ALL ABOUT CHILDREN:

McFly, pictured with a boy from Demelza, and Peter Andre, left, are to perform at Music On The Hill, with all profits going to children's charities had such encouraging feedback from before that it's spurred us on to produce an even better event this time round. We think we've pulled together a really exciting line-up, with something to appeal to everyone."

The event starts on the Friday night with Jools Holland and his 18-piece Rhythm & Blues Orchestra. He will be joined by Roland Gift, voice of Fine Young Cannibals, and vocalist Ruby Turner.

The Saturday will feature two separately-ticketed events. Organisers will welcome back McFly for a special afternoon show following their sell-out appearance in 2011, while the evening slot has Peter Andre headlining.

Sunday's line-up is straight out of the reality-show catalogue with X Factor winners Matt Cardle and Joe McElderry. There will also be performances by Pop Idol's Gareth Gates, the Bucks Fizz trio of Cheryl, Jay and Mike and Whitstable's X Factor star Ben Mills.

The Sunday show will be hosted by radio and TV presenter Dave Berry and have something for the adults as tribute acts Killer Queen and Counterfeit Stones take stage.

Kent fashion designer Karen Millen OBE founded the Teens Unite Fighting Cancer charity. She said: "The event will be a great opportunity for the community to support local charities while having fun."

"Money raised will go towards a capital appeal for a care centre in Kent, after the first one opened in Hertfordshire earlier this year. It will make a big difference to Teens Unite and will ensure we can support more teenagers with cancer and other life-limiting illnesses."

Every penny of profit goes to charity, with the 2011 event raising more than £60,000 – enough to provide two new community nurses for Demelza.

Sarah Marsh, events coordinator for Demelza, said: "The money will make a real difference to the support we give to families across the area and help add life to days when days cannot be added to life."

Ticket prices vary for events but are free for children under five years old. Family tickets and VIP packages are available. For more details, visit www.musiconthehill.org.uk or alternatively phone the 24-hour box office on 0844 873 7342.

NOW OPEN

We heard that Marchants might close if it did not find a new owner, I confess as locals we were worried, we did not want to lose our only, rather special butcher (without a doubt one of the best in Kent) so I guess I was up for a gamble..... and bought it, lock, stock and barrel (well, block, smock and chiller)!

Over the last months we have brought it up to date and increased the offering somewhat (added fresh lobster, skate, oysters and other hard to find goodies).

We now make our own pork pies and gala pies from the same free range pork we make our (Doug's) award winning sausages from, homemade steak and free range chicken pies are already being eaten along with big juicy sausage rolls and the best scotch eggs (all eggs from our own very free range chickens) you have ever eaten!

We will soon make our own artisan bread, but that's just a little way off yet, I think. We have been given the OK to sell good wine, local ales and cider.

Doug Marchant and his son (after nearly 40 years) are still making the sausages and Rob our real top end (best end?) master butcher is running the shop where you will actually see the 30 - 35 day dry aged, grass fed Scottish or local beef, hanging before you.

If the beef is ready we will be open by the 14th of February, so if you want the best Sunday roast you have ever purchased or a bottle of champagne for that Valentine's dinner now's your chance!

Start-ups rise part of a growing trend

BUSINESS Secretary Vince Cable said he welcomed the record number of company formations last year in Gillingham – and said it was an indication of a growing national trend towards start-ups.

Town MP Rehman Chishti asked the minister about business growth in the constituency, after the latest Duport Business Confidence Report showed there were 148 company formations between July and September last year – more than any other third quarter on record. This is a rise of 23 per cent compared with 2011.

Cable said: "A large amount of entrepreneurial activity is taking place. The percentage of the population engaged in business has increased from about 6 per cent to 9 per cent in the past two years, and what is happening in Gillingham is an example of that."

The report also shows that that net company growth also reached a new record, with the company register increasing by 84. This compares with 54 in 2011.

Olympic Jess presents sole trader award

WEALTH management specialist Neil Taylor has received an award as one of the top sole traders in his finance company from Olympic gold-medallist Jessica Ennis.

Taylor, from Ashford, was one of the top three staff at London-based St James's Place during 2012.

Taylor said: "I was delighted to receive the award on behalf of the practice, which is a reflection of the high-quality wealth-management services we offer to individuals and businesses."

St James's Place is a leading UK financial investment-management organisation and has funds of £34.8 billion.

Innovation centre to mentor more future business leaders thanks to communities cash

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

VISITOR:

MP Nick Boles took a tour of Ramsgate's Marlowe Innovation Centre

A PIONEERING scheme linking business opportunities, start-ups and training is to be expanded following joint public- and private-sector funding.

New space and facilities for innovative businesses are to be created at a project aimed at offering support to new companies in Thanet – which will in turn encourage young people in their future careers.

The Marlowe Innovation Centre in Ramsgate is to build an extension that will double its accommodation and support services following the announcement of a £350,000 grant from the Government's Coastal Communities Fund.

The balance of the £1 million cost will be provided by The Roger De Haan Charitable Trust, one of the original funders of the project.

This will enable space for 25 new companies – creating an estimated 75 jobs if current usage figures are taken on board.

The announcement was made during a visit to the centre on Monday by Nick Boles MP, Under Secretary of State for Planning in the Department for Communities and Local Government.

The new businesses will aid in work-motivating and mentoring young people at the neighbouring Marlowe Academy, as is already being done by companies currently in residence.

It is planned to open the extension in June 2014.

At present the centre has 25 work spaces, with 75 people employed. These are used as offices or light industrial units and targeted at new small businesses, which, in return, commit to helping the next generation of the business community.

The new extension will provide a similar mix of office and light-industrial usage, with firms encouraged to network and provide mutual encouragement and support.

The Marlowe Innovation Centre is the only such project in the country to be located on a school site, rather than at a university.

All tenants agree to allocate time each month to working with the students of the Marlowe Academy, and more than 150 young people have benefited in this way since the centre opened. Help includes work experience, CV preparation, interview practice, careers advice, mentoring and special projects.

Students work with businesses specialising in branding, app-creation, printing, physiotherapy, dentistry, finance and electronics.

Tenants' rent is also ploughed back into development work at the school.

The Coastal Communities Fund was launched by the Government in March 2012 to support the economic development of coastal communities by promoting sustainable economic growth and jobs.

Capital and revenue grants are available for a range of applicant organisations and projects that benefit towns on the coast.

The Coastal Communities Fund will open again for applications soon. Priorities for next year have not been formally agreed although the focus will remain on funding initiatives to foster economic development in coastal communities.

Ferry firm axes IT and catering jobs

A TOTAL of 42 jobs has been lost at cross-Channel ferry operator P&O.

They consist of 16 positions in catering and 26 IT posts, all based at the company's Dover headquarters, Channel House. The move follows a consultation, called Project 2013, that was launched last autumn and looked to increase company profitability.

The company says there are no more job losses planned.

A spokesman said: "This goes back to a restructuring plan which was put into action at the end of last year in an effort to cut costs. Both catering and IT were areas which came under scrutiny."

Colleges encouraged to take part in south east business competition

ENTRIES: From last year

COLLEGES across Kent, Sussex and Surrey are being urged to take part in an annual inter-college business competition for Year 12 students.

The Young Business Minds 2013 contest aims to give students an insight into the world of business and is now in its third year.

Students are divided into teams of four and work together to build a business plan during a two-week period for a product or service. It is then pitched to judges and a winner revealed.

Neil Edwards, managing director of organisers the Marketing Eye, said: "The competition has won great support from both the students taking part and their teachers. We'd like to involve more colleges in East Sussex, as well as working with some in West Sussex and Kent."

Enter skills contest says Dragon Paphitis

DRAGONS' Den star Theo Paphitis has called on the ambitious to enter the WorldSkills UK National Competitions - with the chance to build on their skills, test their knowledge and showcase their potential to future employers.

Managed by the National Apprenticeship Service, the finalists battle it out in front of 100,000 spectators at The Skills Show which takes place at Birmingham's NEC on November 14-16. Mr Paphitis is patron of the event.

Microsoft founder Bill Gates donates money

THE Medway campus of the University of Greenwich is celebrating after securing a grant from a foundation set up by Microsoft founder Bill Gates.

The Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation has presented $1.5m for the three-year project to the university's national resources institute.

It aims to support research to detect damaging viruses which can reduce the yield of valuable yam crops for smallholder farmers in west Africa.

ON THE UP: There has been a sharp increase in the number of people registering for apprenticeships

Employers cash in as apprentice figures rise

THERE has been a sharp increase in the number of apprenticeships - with the latest Government figures revealing a rise of nearly 25 per cent in the space of a year.

Kent recorded the second highest number of starts in the south east during the 2011/12 academic year, with some 11,200 registering to start an apprenticeship.

That marks a 24.1 per cent rise on the previous year.

In Medway, there were 2,700 - up 10.9 per cent on the previous year.

Across the south east region, there were 66,850 new apprenticeships.

Nationwide, the number topples half a million - up 13.9 per cent.

Business secretary Vince Cable said: "Whenever I speak to businesses, a lack of trained workers is a frequent concern.

"These figures mean we are starting to turn the tide. Over half a million people took up an apprenticeship last year, showing that our investment in vocational skills is paying off."

Skills minister Matthew Hancock said: "It's great news that apprenticeships have gone up by 14.6 per cent in the south east, to 66,850.

"Apprenticeships are vital in the Government's drive to create a more highly-skilled workforce who are better able to compete in the global race.

"We are strengthening apprenticeships further to make them more rigorous, and to respond to the ever-changing needs of the modern workplace."

David Way, chief executive of the National Apprenticeship Service, said: "I am pleased that new data confirms that apprenticeships overall are increasingly popular.

"Apprenticeships have much to offer and by working closely with employers, we have come a long way in raising quality standards.

"Our immediate and continuing focus is on growing apprenticeships at 16-18, supported by the apprenticeship grant for employers to recruit a young apprentice, which is proving increasingly popular with small employers, and we are putting in place additional measures including a marketing campaign targeted at employers and young people."

Through the Apprenticeship Grant for Employers (AGE) of 16-24 year olds, businesses who choose to grow their business through apprenticeships can access funding of £1,500.

The grant is open to organisations employing up to 1,000 people, who have never employed an apprentice before, or have not recruited one in the past 12 months.

Mr Way added: "Apprenticeships come with a guarantee of quality, giving young people a job with training, and are proven to deliver a significant return on investment, so this really is a win-win initiative for employers. There has never been a better time to recruit an apprentice. I hope more organisations will look to benefit."

Apply for share of training finance pot

A MULTI-million pound cash-pot has been made available to businesses of all sizes to fund tailored training programmes to address their specific skills needs.

The Employer Ownership Pilot (EOP) has already committed around £90 million and leveraged £115 million from companies including Siemens, AkzoNobel and AJ Woods Engineering.

Now time is ticking to apply for the next round of funding.

Projects range from helping young people into work by delivering pre-employment training, to extending apprenticeships and training to supply chains.

Applications are now open for the second round and will close on March 28.

Skills minister Matthew Hancock said: "For British businesses to succeed and compete in the global race, they need a highly-skilled workforce that can meet the challenges of the future.

"With applications for round two now open, I would urge businesses - particularly small companies - to consider how the fund can help them grow, from creating new apprenticeship programmes to setting up specialist training academies."

There is up to £240m available for the second round - bringing a total Government investment of £340m.

Commerce cautiously optimistic as fears of triple-dip recession recede

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

FEARS of a triple-dip recession for the UK economy have receded, with economists saying the country was back in growth mode after the 0.3 per cent drop in the final three months of last year.

And business analysis across Kent reflects the national upward trend as, both countywide and nationally, business confidence is reported to be on the increase.

But according to the Kent Chamber of Commerce, more leadership and direction from Government is needed to promote growth.

The boost for business follows better-than-expected activity in the services sector, which contributes three-quarters of the national financial output. This part of the economy – which covers banking to hotels – shrank for the first time in two years in December, and economists had thought it would continue to contract at the start of the year.

There were fears of a further recession as recently as the last week in January, after figures showing Gross Domestic Product declined in the final quarter of 2012.

This brought the UK to the brink of its third recession in four years, using the technical definition of a recession as two consecutive quarters of contraction.

But the CIPS/Markit purchasing managers' index for January beat the gloomy forecasts, rising to 51.5 last month – above the 50 mark that separates expansion from contraction.

Confidence across the business sector rebounded to its highest level since May 2012, as stronger demand drove new orders and the rise in employment was the largest for six months.

Also output in Britain's factories grew at the fastest rate for 16 months in January.

"A huge sigh of relief accompanies these numbers, as a return to growth of the service sector in January greatly reduces the likelihood of the UK falling back into a triple-dip recession," said Chris Williamson, chief economist for financial analyst Markit.

Jo James, of Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce, was also upbeat but wanted further action to support commerce and industry.

She said: "We agree with Markit that the economy is in a healthier position than the Office of National Statistics data suggest. Kent Invicta Chamber regularly surveys businesses to get an

ON THE UP? The service sector showed encouraging results, but Jo James says that more must be done

Investment key to continued growth

CITY analysts have echoed Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce concerns over sustainable economic growth.

Although prospects have received an unexpected boost, a rise in investment is needed to ensure any recovery is long-term, according to economic forecasters.

Business confidence is increasing and the bank lending drought is easing, according to a series of surveys that fuel hopes the economy could be slowly turning around.

However, some experts are still worried by the lack of business investment.

"Despite a rise in confidence, companies' modest plans for capital investment are a worry as this is crucial to a strong and sustained recovery," said Scott Barnes, chief executive of Grant Thornton UK.

Business confidence is at an 18-month high, according to a survey conducted by financial experts Icaew and Grant Thornton.

Experts says the surge in their business confidence monitor index from +4.2 at the end of last year to 12.8 suggests the economy will grow by 0.4 per cent in the first quarter.

Lloyds Bank said its monthly business barometer found the net balance of firms that were positive about their trading outlook rose six points to 46 per cent in January. It is also forecasting a "modest expansion" in the economy of 0.3 to 0.4 per cent.

The rise in corporate confidence comes as the Ernst & Young Item Club reports that lending to businesses and households is at the healthiest levels since 2010.

After an estimated 4 per cent fall last year – its lowest level since 2006 – bank lending to firms is forecast to rise 2 per cent this year.

According to Icaew, the private sector has seen a 1 per cent rise in staff in the past year, and firms expect to increase jobs by 1.5 per cent over the next 12 months, a sentiment echoed by the recruiter Reeds.

understanding of their trading environment. The latest results show that all the key economic indicators – domestic sales/order and export sales/orders – have improved in recent months. Business confidence is also higher than at any time over the past two years in the county.

"But there is no doubt growth is inadequate and there is much the Government can do to help the economy, especially in investment in infrastructure."

Ex Tesco boss slammed for 'progress' remarks over decline of the high street

SIR Terry Leahy, the former boss of Tesco, has come under attack for describing the rise of supermarkets and the closure of small shops as "progress".

He said the decline of high streets was a result of families choosing to use supermarkets.

Sir Terry suggested high streets were no longer fit for modern families and some had effectively become irrelevant relics.

But the Federation of Small Businesses (FSB) said its Keep Trade Local campaign highlighted the role played by high streets and their importance to local economies.

It also showed that more of the money spent in local shops stayed in the local economy compared with that spent in a supermarket.

Roger House, FSB chairman for Kent and Medway, said: "There is no doubt Kent's high streets are going through change, but these comments are unhelpful and undermine the reality businesses face on the ground.

"Shop closures put people off going to the high street, meaning the firms that remain continue to struggle.

"The cost of parking also puts people off – especially when supermarkets and out-of-town centres have free spaces. Local shops help to provide jobs in the area while being able to source good-quality products."

House said that many high streets in Kent had reinvented themselves, looking at innovative ways to encourage people to shop locally.

He added that supermarkets could work well with small businesses, selling locally-sourced produce.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Balls says new bank would assist SMEs

SHADOW Chancellor Ed Balls has called for a new bank to be established to allow small businesses that want to obtain funds for growth to be able to do so.

His proposal has the backing of the Federation of Small Businesses in Kent, which has been campaigning for more lending.

Balls also called for a National Insurance tax break for small businesses taking on workers.

Second phase of isle scheme is unveiled

A £30 MILLION project on the Isle of Sheppey could create 150 jobs, it is claimed.

A new Morrisons supermarket at Neats Court, Queenborough, is under construction and developer LXB Retail Properties has put forward plans for Phase 2 of the scheme. These are include retail outlets and restaurants.

The second phase of the plans will be studied by Swale council in April.

Good news for county's HMV stores... for now

ALL of Kent's HMV stores will stay open for the immediate future at least, administrator Deloitte having failed to name them among the initial closure of 66 UK stores.

The finance company had announced 930 staff would lose their jobs at the high-street chain over the next two months.

Just across the county border, however, HMV stores in Orpington and Bexleyheath will close.

Apprenticeships at a record high in district

A RECORD number of young people are in apprenticeship training in Swale, according to Government statistics showing that in financial year 2011/12 a total of 1,090 people started as apprentices in Sittingbourne and Sheppey, compared with 440 in 2009/10.

Figures for the first quarter of 2012/13 were also encouraging, with 280 more young people entering training schemes.

A soft landing if you buy space mattress

MATTRESSES designed as a by-product of NASA space missions are to go on sale at Bluewater.

Danish brand Tempur Mattresses is set to open a retail outlet there early this summer.

The products were developed after research into how best to cushion astronauts against the extremely high gravity forces they encounter when a spacecraft blasts off.

Clothing company Lea-Ray gets bigger

CORPORATE clothing and promotional merchandising company Lea-Ray is expanding and opening a new head office.

The family-run concern is moving into new premises in Whitstable while still keeping on its shop in Faversham that sells school uniforms.

"We have been in business since 1978 and things are going well," said sales director Sam Allen.

Now Blockbuster and Republic hit the rocks

THE high street has suffered two further blows with the news that two more companies are calling in the administrators.

The fashion chain Republic and DVD-rental outlet Blockbuster are the latest to put jobs at risk as poor trading figures force restructuring.

Blockbuster is to close an additional 164 stores, including its Gravesend and Dover branches, over the coming weeks.

Last month it announced the closure of 160 stores, including those in Rainham, Ashford and Sevenoaks. They will remain open for business as usual until the closure date.

Republic, the clothing chain that has a target customer base of young people, is looking to appoint accountancy firm Ernst & Young as administrator.

Its Kent stores are in Canterbury, Maidstone, Tunbridge Wells and Bluewater.

Government scheme offers first-time buyers chance to book a home

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

HOMEBUYERS who want to take advantage of the Government's FirstBuy 2 scheme – aimed at first-time buyers – can now reserve their homes.

This will enable them to complete the purchase of properties from Monday, April 1, 2013 to Monday, March 31, 2014.

Developer Persimmon Homes South East will be the first housebuilder in the region to offer prospective homebuyers access to the scheme after signing up with the Homes and Communities Agency.

FirstBuy is designed to help first-time buyers into home ownership. In the first round of funding, thousands of people were helped on to the property ladder.

This second round of funding sees a further £280 million being invested by the Government.

Under the scheme, the buyer purchases a new home on an approved FirstBuy new-build development with assistance from both the Homes and Communities Agency and the housebuilder in the form of two equity loans.

The buyer must take out a first mortgage with a qualifying lending institution such as a bank or building society. This mortgage, together with any cash contribution from the institution, must be a minimum of 80 per cent of the full purchase price; the maximum full purchase price is set at £280,000.

The agency and the housebuilder will provide equal equity loans to fund the balance needed to make up the full purchase price of the home, up to a maximum of 20 per cent of the full purchase price. These equity loans must be repaid when the home is sold.

In addition, the buyer may make voluntary part-repayments of the equity loans – a policy known as staircasing.

The equity loans are interest-free for the first five years. After that, the buyer will pay a fee on each of the equity loans of 1.75 per cent, rising annually by the increase – if any – in the Retail Price Index plus 1 per cent.

Darren Jones, managing director of Persimmon Homes South East, said: "This is a huge help for people trying to get their first foot on the property ladder and we're pleased to be able to work with the Government to support the scheme."

"FirstBuy, along with NewBuy and now New-Buy Part Exchange, which has just been launched, are all helping to get people moving."

HELPING HAND: Darren Jones, from Persimmon, has seen a rise in numbers looking at properties

"Visitor numbers to our developments have seen a significant rise in recent weeks and we're positive that our FirstBuy announcement will see numbers rise even further."

...but saving for the deposit could take up to seven years

THE new Government initiatives to help first-time buyers have been introduced at a time when it is becoming more and more costly to obtain the money necessary for a first property purchase.

Young people are increasingly becoming unable to get a foothold in the property market and it takes a person in their 20s seven years to get the deposit to put down on a house, according to a report by the Home Builders Federation.

It says that on average a person in their 20s wanting to purchase the average first-time-buyer home – currently thought to cost £175,265 – will have to save £35,053.

Even saving one third of their net income, taking into account average salaries, it would take them almost seven years – 83 months – to get the money to buy a first home.

In 2002, it would have taken two-and-a-half years, the report found.

The percentage of income required for a deposit has also gone up.

For those aged between 22 to 29, the average deposit is 229 per cent of net annual salary, with regional variations making it most expensive in the South East, while the north and west of the country have lower costs but also lower wages.

The federation said the findings showed there was a shortage of affordable homes.

THERE has been concern that Range Rovers are increasingly domesticated and live mostly in towns. But I can report that this noble beast has been spotted in its natural habitat and, after four generations, still survives the harshest conditions.

In fact, the RR (from £71,295) is even more adept at what it does best, though rarely put to the test: ploughing through muck and scaling and descending the most daunting heights.

Indeed, the launch event I attended included descent of a 1.175 gradient at a former tank-testing centre that, to nobody's great surprise, was also used to film some stunts in the latest Bond movie, Skyfall.

Yes, I was worried about a sky fall, too, on that gradient – one nobody could descend on foot unaided – but the beast edged down without drama.

It was helped by its renowned grip and Land Rover's Terrain Control system, now fully automatic so that even urbanite RR-buyers don't have to think about selecting the right mode when they accidentally commune with nature rather than Hyde Park Corner.

But a Weight Watchers' regime, headlined by creation of the world's first aluminium SUV body, also helped. This has made the RR 420 kilos or 39 per cent lighter than its steel-bodied predecessor – equivalent to the weight of five adults.

This also benefits the car's on-road manners; the lightness means it doesn't heel on cornering like an overladen galleon. Indeed, this is the first RR I've actually enjoyed driving.

Fat-busting has also shaken up powertrain options. The bonkers petrol V8s are virtually redundant, as decent performance (0-60 in 6.5 seconds) is now offered via the diesel V8, while the diesel V6 delivers all the power and economy most buyers will demand: 0-60 in 7.4 seconds and 37.7mpg official combined – both good for a car of this bulk.

The RR has also acquired the new wardrobe and glow, as well as the zeal, of a Weight Watchers' star dieter: the roofline is lower and clever side-on cosmetics make the car look longer and sleeker than before, notably through a wraparound extension to the front headlights, a discreet rear roof spoiler, and sculpted 'gills' on the front door.

The last echoes side vents on the old car, but these were made redundant this time so stylists adapted and shifted them to make a 'signature' seemingly destined to continue.

Such style is important, for the new car recognises that the RR is no longer simply an SUV but a refined limousine that just happens to have massive off-road capability. A symbol of this is that the rear can now be specified with two luxurious 'armchairs' and centre console rather than seats for three. I couldn't see a glass partition on the extras list, though...

New-look Weight Watchers' Range Rover beats Skyfall

BEAUTIFUL BODY: Having lost the weight equivalent of five adults, the latest Range Rover continues to offer an impressive off-roading ability while also looking good

/// DON'T LIKE ///

... that, for all its majestic ability, the RR is still ridiculously expensive, but the wealthy surely love its 'reassuringly expensive' image

/// NOT SURE ///

... it will please the green lobby, but Land Rover has pulled out all the stops to build in as much sustainability and economy as possible

/// REALLY LIKE ///

Peugeot's Partner Tepee now packs true picnicking power

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

WE Brits don't really 'get' cars like the Peugeot Partner Tepee.

In fact, despite the quirky name, you probably haven't ever matched this label with the slightly anonymous and boxy 'Postman Pat' car seen on the road.

But the Tepee and its smaller sister, the even more exotically named Bipper Tepee, is one of a number of so-called van-based budget MPVs from the Continent, except that most are now built on car platforms and all the better for it.

The Partner Tepee owes its underpinnings to the Peugeot 308, not the greatest family hatchback to drive perhaps, but perfectly acceptable for this incarnation – a tent on wheels.

Yes, the Tepee really does echo the American Indian tepee from which it takes its name; it's tall and capacious, with access made easy by two sliding rear doors inherited from the Partner van.

The van's big lift-up tailgate is also a boon, being well out of the way when loading over the low threshold into a huge cargo area but not hinging up so high it will scrape the garage roof or be less effective as a shelter against the rain.

I've used a Tepee as a picnic gazebo before, so I know why sporting people, anglers, birders and other outdoor types love this type of car.

Depending on the model, you can also have up to seven seats, with the rear five folding or removable, according to your chosen configuration at any time.

There is also masses of stowage, including standard-fit shelving above the front sun visors, another van legacy and the ideal place for travel documents, passports, maps, books and so on.

For those who really like to cram their cars with stuff, though, there is also the optional £580 Zenith roof-pack, comprising four glass panels to flood even more light into an airy interior, plus an overhead locker and extra ventilation from a central roof console.

ALL PACKED UP: Peugeot's Tepee is ideal for those who love the great outdoors or for a large family, with the option of seven seats that can be configured to suit your needs

On the other hand, you might want to spend £650 on air-con if you're not buying the higher-grade seven-seat Family or chunky-looking Outdoor model, the latter being the variant we tested.

Priced from £16,205, the Outdoor has some fashionable off-roader cosmetics, but you can also make it walk the talk a little by specifying the keenly-priced £545 All Terrain Pack that brings Grip Control for added traction to the front-driving wheels in tricky conditions, plus a higher suspension and some under-engine protection.

But it's the lesser Partner Tepee models that are probably best value and ideal people-carriers for those on a tight budget.

Don't skip too much on the power front, though: the 98bhp Urban base model (£12,955) and 120bhp S (£14,055) petrol variants don't make much sense on the grounds they are thirstier and incur a hefty road tax – £170 and £195 respectively, with the latter hitting £275 in year one due to the so-called 'showroom tax'.

Trading up to a thrifter diesel doesn't cost that much more upfront, either, though the asthmatic 75bhp diesel S model (£14,105) could be a liability due to glacial acceleration – you might need a spinnaker sail to better its 0-62mph in 17.1 seconds. Instead, best find the extra £450 that gets you into a 92bhp diesel, starting with the S spec at £14,555.

That costs you £120-a-year road tax and offers an official combined 54.3mpg. With a low list price, that makes this quirky alternative MPV attractive to recession-hit families.

Who knows, maybe we will now start to 'get' cars like this, as they do in France and Italy.

First GEAR MOTORING NEWS

New ultimate Toyota GT86

THERE'S a new flagship version of the Toyota GT86 – the rear-wheel-drive coupé was one of the best cars we tested in 2012.

The GT86 TRD is on sale from March 1, but move fast as just 250 examples are allocated for UK enthusiasts.

Priced from £31,495, it features 18-inch alloys, front and side skirts, rear spoiler and quad exhaust.

50 years fly by for 911 legend

PORSCHE'S legendary rear-engine, rear-driven 911 celebrates its 50th birthday this year, the inspiration for the German marque's growing sporting line-up.

More than 820,000 911s have been built across seven generations that began with air-cooled engines – still prized for their distinctive sound – before the switch to water-cooling.

The car's racing origins have also seen it pioneer many motoring innovations.

Civic to hit the wagon trail?

HONDA has unveiled a racy wagon or estate concept version of its Civic hatchback that strongly hints at the final production version – to be built at its Swindon UK plant.

It might not add much load space to the standard five-door hatch, but it will enhance the image of the Civic line-up, now including an excellent 1.6-litre diesel option.

Number of signatures required on a petition for a referendum on whether the Borough should change its governance arrangements

The Borough Council is required, by the Local Government Act 2000, to publish the minimum number of signatures which would be needed to support a valid petition requiring the Council to hold a referendum on whether or not the Borough should start to operate the mayor and cabinet executive or committee system.

The minimum number of signatures (equivalent to 5% of the Borough's local government electorate) is 4929.

The above number will apply to any petition submitted to the Borough Council before 1 April 2014. However, a new number will be published in February 2014 and if the new number is less than 4929, then the new number will apply from the date it is published.

ASHFORD (PROHIBITION OF DRIVING)
TEMPORARY ORDER 2013

THE ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984
AS AMENDED BY THE ROAD TRAFFIC
(TEMPORARY RESTRICTIONS) ACT 1991

Because of carriageway repairs and resurfacing, Kent County Council intends to make an Order prohibiting through traffic on Sussex Avenue, Sturges Road and Kent Avenue, Ashford, on or after 4 March 2013 as described below.

The three roads will be closed in succession, in phases for their entire lengths.

The roads will be closed from Monday 4 March 2013 for up to one week, for carriageway patching works, between 09:00 hours and 17:00 hours each day.

Micro-surfacing is planned for Saturday 23 March & Sunday 24 March 2013, between 07:00 and 19:00 hours each day, with the roads re-opened outside of these hours.

Additional closures will be required for a further 2 days within 14 days from completion of the surfacing, to allow for re-alignment of covers in the carriageway. There is no alternative route, as such. The one-way Traffic Orders for the three roads will be suspended to allow limited access up to the point of closure, from either direction.

Arrangements are in place with Ashford Borough Council to suspend parking and provide alternative parking for residents in a nearby car park.

VARIOUS ROADS, KENT (PROHIBITION OF DRIVING & 10MPH SPEED RESTRICTION) TEMPORARY ORDER 2013

THE ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984 AS AMENDED BY THE ROAD TRAFFIC (TEMPORARY RESTRICTIONS) ACT 1991

To allow a programme of carriageway resurfacing works to be carried out, Kent County Council has made an Order to restrict traffic on various roads in Kent, as shown below.

The Order will become effective on or after 18th February 2013 for up to 3 months, or until the works have been completed.

The planned dates and times for each road closure or restriction are shown below, in a Schedule listed in alphabetical order of District.

Planned dates will be indicated by signage displayed on site 14 days in advance. Road closures and other restrictions will be in effect when the appropriate signage and barriers are in place.

Every effort will be made to keep to the schedule shown below. Some minor modifications may be made to dates and duration of works, to be advised once known.

Adverse weather conditions may prevent some works being carried out on the planned dates.

Roads that are missed will be re-scheduled, as advised locally and signposted on site.

Clarke keen to tackle goal of rugby World Cup legacy

Club chairman Roger Clarke talks to Greg Miles about how Kent can capitalise on the 2015 Rugby World Cup

IT'S two years away, but one man in Kent is already getting excited about the Rugby World Cup coming to England's shores.

Roger Clarke, the chairman of Tunbridge Wells Rugby Club, has been tasked with making sure the South East is primed to make the most of the build-up to the 2015 RWC and maximise the legacy after it.

The Rugby Football Union has made £25 million available as part of the Lead Up and Legacy project, for grassroots clubs to improve facilities, train coaches and improve retention of players.

Making the most of the legacy is even more prevalent in the wake of the Olympics and the feeling that England failed to capitalise on winning the world title in 2003 in Australia.

Clarke is one of six on a nationwide committee who will meet to coordinate efforts, share ideas and make sure grassroots rugby will feel the full benefits of hosting the event.

Key areas have been identified to improve upon, including facilities, coaching, schools rugby, player retention and touch rugby.

The 63-year-old was given the voluntary role after applying for an advert in a national newspaper and getting through an interview.

He has responsibility for Area Three, which covers Essex, Kent, Sussex and Surrey.

"I would put the money into facilities," said Clarke. "If you're going to run a club and want to stand on your own two feet, you need to have your own ground rather than a council ground.

"And you need to encourage the whole family to come to the club – it musn't just be a place where Dad goes.

"Clubs need to pull volunteers into the game. Clubs are run by surprisingly low numbers of volunteers. We need to get the message out.

"The biggest challenge for us is to bring more

OPPORTUNITY: Wells's Roger Clarke will be making sure the South East benefits from the 2015 RWC players into the game and trying to improve the percentage of players between 16 and 24 who might be lost by going into further education.

"We need to retain people at that age gap – that's a big challenge for us. If we can reduce or improve it by 20-30 per cent we will be very pleased."

Ten years ago, when Jonny Wilkinson kicked that extra-time drop-goal to seal a famous World Cup final win for England, rugby saw a boost, as you would expect.

But RFU chiefs feel the country has missed out on the longer-term benefits of that win because of a lack of a proper legacy structure.

"I think a lot has been learnt from that. Ten years ago we would have talked a good game. The structure wasn't in place to make sure we did get it," said Clarke.

"There wasn't the competition for rugby – there are so many other things to do now in a sporting sense. If you were to measure success for us at the moment, it's not so much creating clubs but making sure they have more sides.

"We haven't done too badly at Tunbridge Wells – we still run four sides, but around the period after the win we ran about five. That's what a lot of clubs have experienced.

"I've been county chairman for five years and I've been impressed with the way things have been handled. We have always been at the forefront of the RFU planning – the guinea pigs on a whole range of things."

England is well placed to pull in supporters for the event and could exceed the benchmark set by the successful 2011 RWC in New Zealand.

That brought in the equivalent of £92m to the economy, sustained the equivalent of 29,000 jobs in one year and saw 133,000 visitors flock to the islands.

The organising group for 2015 has already said it is expecting 400,000 visitors and a further 4.2 billion people to watch on television.

TAKING OLYMPICS' LEAD

RUGBY is set to learn a few lessons from the London 2012 Olympics in its Lead Up and Legacy plans.

In fact it is taking the guidebook straight from the person who helped mastermind the Games last summer – Debbie Jevans.

Jevans, who was director of sport for the Games delivery team, LOCOG, has been appointed chief executive of England Rugby, which is tasked with organising the 2015 Rugby World Cup.

The former professional tennis-player has also brought in some members of her Olympics team to deliver the event, with the former chief executive of LOCOG, Paul Deighton, joining the England 2015 board, along with former Grand Slam-winner and current RFU and Six Nations chairman Bill Beaumont.

One of the key things the RWC 2015 is hoping to harness from the Olympics is the Games Makers volunteers, who made London 2012 such a success.

The Lead up and Legacy project is set to deliver £25 million of funding, which will be put towards 500 clubs nationwide; £1m will go to training 6,500 new referees and coaches and recruiting 5,000 volunteers for the World Cup.

It is hoped that the money will inspire more than one million youngsters to get involved in the game through a schools programme that will see more than 400 non-rugby-playing secondary schools take up the game by 2015, while the RFU wants 15,000 more people to take up touch-rugby by the tournament start.

It is set to be a big decade for the sport, which has a real chance to expand its popularity with the shorter sevens version of the game set to make its debut at the Rio Olympics in 2016.

Flying Fulham winger signs on to boost Gills promotion push GILLINGHAM boss Martin Allen has boosted his attacking options by signing Fulham winger Ryan Williams.

Allen made it clear this week he needed to bolster his squad after his son Charlie broke his hand in the goalless draw at York City on Tuesday. The Gills will also be missing leading scorer Danny Kedwell for a few weeks as he recovers from a hamstring injury that ruled him out of the 1-0 win at Bradford City.

Williams was born in Perth, Australia, and signed at Portsmouth in 2010. He made his debut in the Championship against Middlesbrough on the opening day of the 2011/12 season against his older brother Rhys, who is Boro captain.

The 19-year-old made four more appearances at Fratton Park, but his quick feet and direct style were enough for Premier League Fulham to snap him up in January last year.

"He's positive, he can open up defences, he's fast, he's direct and he's a good player," said Allen.

Gills have the option to extend his 28-day loan once it expires.

Ladies lose cricket World Cup crown after Aussies lose semi ENGLAND Ladies' slim hopes of retaining their World Cup crown were dashed on Wednesday after the West Indies defeated Australia.

They needed the Aussies, who had already booked their place in Sunday's final, to comfortably beat the West Indies in the first semi-final. England then needed to record a decent win in their semi against New Zealand to stand any chance of progressing.

England, captained by Kent's skipper Charlotte Edwards and featuring county players Lydia Grenway, Laura Marsh and Tammy Beaumont, knew halfway through their 15-run win over the Kiwis that they would not make it as the Windies had secured an eight-run win hours earlier.

Edwards said: "I found out by looking up at the big screen while I was batting, which is not ideal.

"It's our own fault, though. Our own inconsistency up front in the tournament has cost us. But there is still a lot to be proud of – a lot of these players have got great futures in the game."

DeGale set for Glowing return in defence of WBC Silver Belt

OLYMPIC gold-medallist James DeGale is set to return to Bluewater's Glow complex to defend his WBC Silver Belt.

The fight, promoted by Mick Hennessy, will take place on Saturday, March 23, against an opponent yet to be named.

Middleweight fighter Chris Eubank Jnr will also be on the bill.

DeGale fought at Glow back in October, defeating Hadillah Mohoumadi. Ticket sales surpassed expectation, paving the way for a return fight at the venue.

"I'm excited to be boxing at Glow again. It was a tremendous atmosphere for my last fight and it's a great venue to headline at," said DeGale.

"This year is going to be a big year for me. I'm looking to be the first-ever British Olympic gold-medallist who goes on and wins a professional world title."

Tickets for the match are priced from £35.

Camier aiming to challenge on new machine with fixed wrist

By Greg Miles

greg.miles@archant.co.uk

LEON Camier is hoping to put mechanical problems and surgery on his wrist behind him as he gets his World Superbike season under way.

The Ashford ace is a week away from the start of the 2013 season and full of confidence he can hold his own on his new machine – if things are working as they should.

Last season he finished 14th, having fought against mechanical problems for the majority of the campaign while also riding with a swollen wrist as a result of a previous break.

Having seen the hard work his team have put in during the off season and in recent tests, he is hoping that will be a distant memory come next weekend when he gets on the grid at Phillip Island in Australia.

"There's no reason I cannot be fighting for podiums because they have made some decent progress with the bike," said the 25-year-old. "If it's working well, for sure I know I can be up there – it's up to me to make the difference.

"At the end of last year we were down on power, but in one race we came from 16th to the podium. I felt I was riding good last year. There are a few things I'm working on to get more out of qualifying."

He is also expecting it to be one of the most competitive years ever, despite the retirement of two-time champion Max Biaggi. He said: "There are so many good riders, it's going to be one of the strongest years ever. There's no reason we cannot be pretty competitive."

At the final set of tests in Jerez in Spain at the end of January he certainly made his rivals sit up and take notice, posting the fourth-fastest time on his new machine – and that was on a track he had not ridden before.

It was an opportunity to get to grips with the new-spec engine, electronic software and 17-inch wheels that will be used in WSB this season. However, he admits he will not know the full capability of his bike until he gets to the faster Phillip Island track.

"Until I get to test it at Phillip Island I won't really know how good the engine is," he said. "The wheels are OK in the dry and wet, but it's with the conditions in between that we really struggle."

One other thing he will have to overcome is surgery on his wrist. At the end of January he had a screw removed that had been in place since he sustained a broken wrist in 2010.

He revealed he was riding on painkillers last season as a change in driving position on his new Suzuki machine, after his Aprilia the year before, caused him discomfort.

"I broke it in 2010 and had a screw put in to hold it together, which is what I had taken out," he said. "There's been a big cut to get it out, which makes it easy to get infections in. It's at an awkward part of the wrist.

"I was riding on anti-inflammatories and painkillers to get the swelling down. I don't like to ride on painkilling injections, though.

"I was waiting to see a certain specialist to get it done. I was in two minds whether to leave it and see if it did go down, but it's done now."

Newton eyes England future after bronze in South Africa

CANTERBURY'S new England ace Dilly Newton admits it is going to be a tough task to force her way into the national side.

Newton and Canterbury captain Susannah Townsend were part of the England side that picked up a bronze medal in the Investec Challenge in South Africa last week.

The squad, which included eight players who made their debut for England, finished third in the series as they took on the hosts, Holland, and Australia.

They claimed their bronze medal the hard way after twice coming from behind to force extra-time in their third-place play-off against the Aussies. They went on to win the penalty shoot-out 3-2.

Newton claimed her first England cap on the tour against South Africa, scoring a penalty corner in the match.

The 23-year-old defender had previously won seven caps for Great Britain as part of the performance squad getting ready for last summer's Olympics, only to be omitted from the final selection.

"It's obviously such an honour to get my first England cap," she said. "I got my first GB cap towards the end of 2011, but I'm still really proud of my England cap."

"To get senior experience at an international tournament is fantastic. To come away with a bronze medal was brilliant."

England contracts are expected to be awarded in April, and Newton is taking a realistic view about her chances of selection.

"Ideally I would like to be included in the central programme," she said. "It's my dream to be involved in the lead-up to Rio. You need to be realistic with sport because you never know what's going to happen.

"It's a really exciting time to be involved in the sport at the moment – I have just got to wait and see. I have had a taste for it and I know it's what I want."

She now has the rest of the Canterbury season on which to focus. The ladies are sitting at the top of the Premier League after a blistering first half of the season. They started the second half of the campaign last Saturday with a 2-1 win at home to Bowdon Hightown.

This season marks the 100th anniversary of the Gills being known as Gillingham, having originally being founded as New Brompton. We are celebrating those we think deserve a place in the team of the century.

DENNIS HUNT

DOB:

September 8, 1937

Gills stats:

319 appearances, 6 goals

Clubs: Gillingham, Brentford, Folkestone Invicta

ARMY recruit Dennis Hunt was a hard man's hard man who played a key part in the Gills' Fourth Division title win in 1963/64.

The left-back, born in Portsmouth, signed at Priestfield at the age of 21 in 1958, having served in the army.

He instantly became a crowd favourite, combining crunching tackles with the odd attacking foray in Harry Barrett's side.

At 5ft 10in he was not the biggest of defenders, but big enough, and solidly built to put fear into opposing wingers with his uncompromising style.

He was one of the few players to survive a squad cull following Barrett's sacking in 1962 and he became a mainstay under legendary boss Freddie Cox, who guided the Gills to the Fourth Division title in 1963/64.

Hunt missed just three league games that season in a side who conceded just 30 league goals in the whole campaign. They conceded only twice in their first 10 matches and became renowned for their defensive prowess.

They finished the season on 60 points, level with Carlisle United, but clinched the title because of their better goal average.

He drifted out of favour in the Third Division but came back into the fold under Basil Hayward in 1966.

His departure for Brentford in the summer of 1968 was unpopular with the fans, but it was not long before he was back in Kent. After 12 appearances in one season for the Bees, he took up a job as player-manager at Folkestone Invicta, where he stayed until 1973. He later managed Ashford Town from 74-77 and Margate from 77-78.
